MISS GRACE SHANNON, of the Y. W. C. A., telling about Turkish women under Kemal Pasha's regime, says they are freed from compulsory religious education, can get divorces, instead of the bowstring in marital squabbles, and know how to quote the Koran against their husbands.

ONE Mohammedan lady, in Montequieu's "Persian Letters," went farther. She invented a paradise for Mohammedan ladies, no husbands admitted, with handsome young masculine angels always at hand to entertain the lady guests from the earth.

Modern women would be interested in those letters, which created a furore in France 200 years ago. They may be out of print, in English, but libraries would have them. The complete revenge of the harem's chief lady, who poisoned the head eunuch, would gratify feminists.

DR. WILLIAM J. MAYO, one of the famous brothers, says science learns more about disease from the microscope than in any other way. Man's brain is a "visual organ," and must see, to know. The introduction of the microscope, by the Janssen's, late in the Sixteenth Century, has done more to advance learning than any other agent, says Dr. Mayo.

Real learning owes more to Galileo's introduction of the telescope, at the beginning of the Seventeenth Century, than to the microscope. Seeing the germs that cause disease is important, but less so than seeing distant suns and nebulae, perhaps, as the great German scientist Haeckel suggested, men of the future will train one eye for telescopic, the other for microscopic work, the two eyes combined dealing with the real world about us.

LUCKY the man whose tools, implements, and machinery, all his working equipment, are inside his skull. Paderewski, who plays Beethoven magnificently, is put out of commission by an injury to his finger. Beethoven, after he became stone deaf, could write his greatest music and conduct the orchestra, watching the bow of the first violin. When deafening applause stopped the playing, he turned around, facing the audience in surprise. He had not heard a sound. Milton, blind, could work as well as ever, dictating to his daughter.

RUSSIA offers China the blessing of Bolshevist Communism. But China, through her Nationalist government, says "no, thanks," handing to Russian consuls passports and a request to leave China. Everything in Chinese tradition and character is opposed to the Soviet idea. A few young Chinese students, bringing radical ideas from western universities, cannot counteract the influence of old Confucius. He was no Bolshevik.

MEXICO has arranged a grand bull fight in Lindbergh's honor for next Sunday and Lindbergh is puzzled. Politeness says "go." Good folks back home say "don't go, especially on the Sabbath." Diplomacy says "In Mexico, do as the Mexicans do." The spirit of St. Louis says "do exactly as you choose," and that is probably what Lindbergh will do. He might usefully see the bull fight, then tell Mexicans that the sport is dull compared with flying.

INTELLIGENT Mr. Tex Rickard says Jack Dempsey will fight Mr. Tunney again next summer. Certainly, and each of many following summers until death them do part, if the crop of $40-a-seat simpletons lasts.

A cruel government plans to tax each $40 seat $10, but that can be made up by speculators' prices. Mr. Rickard's good fortune is due partly to the fact that men dull enough to enjoy prize fights are too dull to know when they are being "faked."

IT is believed, in the West, that the Tri-State Colorado River Commission, representing California, Arizona and Nevada, will reach an agreement to start work on the Boulder Dam project. Whatever helps one state helps the whole country. Arizona will gain by allowing California to use water and power, now going to waste.

What the country needs is more population to utilize new irrigated lands and consume the country's products, making it independent of foreign markets. The nonsense of immigration laws is a bar to progress. What do those opposed to immigration think would be our condition now, had immigration been checked 50 years ago.

THE House of Representatives overrules President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon, cutting taxes $289,770,000, a cut deeper by fifty-seven millions than that advised by the President and Mr. Mellon. The abolition of the tax on automobiles will be popular, and help the country's most useful industry.

HID UNDER BED, SHE CHARGES

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—While Sebastian S. Kresge, 61, wealthy five and ten-cent store operator, was giving huge sums to charities he was indulging in successive affairs with two women, one a girl of 17, counsel for Mrs. Doris M. Kresge said in a plea for counsel fees to prosecute her suit for divorce.

In a hearing preliminary to Mrs. Kresge's divorce action, her counsel yesterday told of a raid on an apartment off Fifth avenue in which he said Kresge, under the name of Jones, was found with a scantily clad girl, who was hiding under the bed and whom he identified as Miss Gladys Ardelle Fish, 24-year-old stenographer, formerly of Natick, Mass. The girl was named as a co-respondent. Indiscretions with an unidentified 17-year-old girl were also charged.

"THE PRINCESS"

Walter J. Lynch, Mrs. Kresge's lawyer, said Kresge lived in New York from December of last year to April of this year with Miss Fish. A sister of a girl employe in one of the Kresge

2 GANGSTERS MUST DIE FOR MURDER HERE

Vincenzio Ciccia and Oreste Delforte, alleged gangsters, were found guilty of first-degree murder in the death of Rocco Famia, 2173 Lytle street, Hazelwood, August 25 last, and recommended for death in the electric chair, by a jury in Criminal Court today. The jury returned the verdict, the first of its kind in a year, after deliberating 21 hours.

Famia was slain as he washed his face in the kitchen of his home by gangsters who shot through the kitchen window.

"A feud!" Assistant District Attorney A. M. Oliver explained to the jury, leaving with spectators the impression that blackhand activities were to blame for Famia's death.

LINK LOEB, LEOPOLD TO THEFT

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Acting on a theory that either Richard Loeb or Nathan Leopold, now serving life sentences for the murder of little Bobby Franks, may have had a hand in plotting the $22,000 University of Chicago payroll robbery, Thursday, the police have assigned Sergt. Michael Hogan, investigator of paroles, to the case.

Chief of Detectives O'Connor believes the holdup was the work of youths recently released from Joliet penitentiary, where Loeb and Leopold are held. Sergt. Hogan will trace the movements of convicts recently paroled.

Howard H. Moore, attorney for the university, told police that both Loeb and Leopold were familiar with the cashier's office, as they frequently had cashed checks there while they were students.

Capt. Michael Tobin, who was suspended after the robbery, has been reinstated. Chief of Police Hughes declared that the captain had made every effort to induce the university's authorities to accept a police guard.

Early Help Need

Pittsburgh ministers of all denominations met at luncheon in the Chamber of Commerce yesterday to discuss plans for the relief of striking miners in the Pittsburgh district. They sat for three hours behind closed doors and considered the report of Colston E. Warne, assistant professor of economics, University of Pittsburgh, in which he said:

"Numerous trips to the barracks reveal deplorable conditions. Children appear, dressed in summer clothing. Potatoes and beans form almost a standard diet. Thousands of children have been withdrawn from school because of the prevailing poverty. I visited one barrack on a zero day and found the wind coming under the eaves and through numerous cracks. Despite a kitchen stove, the suffering was pathetic."

Starvation has been added to the afflictions of some of the striking coal miners' families along the Panhandle, it is said. With this development, the union leaders are urging that on Bundle Day for the miners next Tuesday, provisions also should be placed in the packages.

The ministers at their meeting yesterday considered the miners' needs from a humanitarian standpoint and discussed how the churches can relieve their distress. The question of responsibility for the strike was not mentioned. A committee was appointed to draw up a plan of action.

Grim of face, Bob Gaitens, a miner at Sturgeon, came to the city yesterday with an urgent appeal for food for the families in the coal villages along the Panhandle Railroad from Oakdale to Bulger. He told a touching story, the truth of which was

Alicia Calles, daughter of the president of Mexico, visiting in Washington, received the news of Col. Lindbergh's arrival in her homeland with true Latin enthusiasm. "He's just wonderful," said Miss Calles, as she sat down the telephone, "and you can't imagine how pleased father is with his mission—and his safe arrival."

PROBE OF MEXICAN PLOT TELEGRAMS BLOCKED

By International News Service

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—The Senate's efforts to obtain the record of telegrams exchanged between the Mexican government and its financial agent, Arturo M. Elias, in New York, during 1926 were frustrated today when James E. Bresnahan, Western Union Telegraph official, informed the Reed committee that all company records for that year have been destroyed.

It was during the year 1926 that the documents published in the Hearst newspapers asserted large sums of money were transmitted to Elias from Mexico City for ostensible distribution to four members of the United States Senate.

Bresnahan was the first witness called today when the Senate committee resumed its investigation into the documents published in the Hearst newspapers. The several subpenas, issued for the telegraph records, covered primarily 1926, and also asked for messages on various dates in 1927.

The destruction of the company's records were up to and including the month of November in 1926, Bresnahan told the committee at the outset. It was early in August of that year that the documents published in the Hearst newspapers assert more than a million dollars was transmitted to Elias for propaganda purposes in the United States.

City Tax Tops 25 Mills

Budget requests for 1928 already approved by council, will increase the tax levy by 2.6 mills on land and 1.3 mills on buildings, in spite of the fact that the total valuation has been boosted more than $40,000,000.

The increases already approved do not include funds for additional police and firemen or any wage raises—with the exception of the increases in councilmanic salaries.

Today the city's lawmakers are hearing the heads of various departments explain why additional sums should be placed at their disposal during the coming year.

The millage for 1928, which probably will be over 25 mills on land, as compared with 22.4 mills in 1927, may be set Monday, if council is able to follow the program outlined at a session last night.

The total millage depends considerably upon the report of a committee appointed to investigate the feasibility of raising the water rents. This committee is composed of Harry A. Little, chairman, John S. Herron and Robert J. Alderdice. It is expected to make its report Monday morning.

Opponents of an increase in the water rents charged today that it would hurt the pocketbooks of taxpayers in every section of the city except Homewood, which is served by the Pennsylvania Water Company, a private concern, whose rates are higher than those charged by the city. Residents there would not be affected by the water rent raise.

The millage will be based upon a total valuation of $1,101,423,000, submitted last night by City Assessor Thomas C. McMahon. This includes Union Township, which will become part of the city January 1. Of the total, $566,611,000 is on land, an increase of $11,395,000 over 1926, and $535,417,000 on buildings, an increase of $30,021,000.

Oil Price Boosted Here

Six grades of Pennsylvania crude oil were advanced from 5 to 10 cents a barrel by purchasing agents at Pittsburgh today.

The new prices are:

Pennsylvania grade in New York Transit lines and Bradford district in National Transit, $2.80; Pennsylvania in National Transit and in Southwest Pennsylvania lines, $2.65; Pennsylvania in Eureka lines, $2.60, all up 5 cents.

Pennsylvania grade in Buckeye lines, $2.35, up 10 cents.

Other grades were unchanged.

SAVES SELF AND 9 AT FIRE

Trapped by flames on the second floor of his home, 510 Locust street, Turtle Creek, early this morning, Nicola Laurito, 38, leaped from a porch roof to the ground, obtained a ladder and carried his wife and eight children to safety.

Laurito was awakened by dense smoke in his bedroom. Partially overcome, he made his way to the bedroom door and found a flaming stairway barring his way. He awakened his wife, Catherine, and his children and then climbed out a window and jumped.

He placed a ladder against the roof, and making several trips to the burning room, carried his family to the ground. He was uninjured.

Laurito then summoned the Turtle Creek fire department. Owing to a new alarm system which is being installed in the borough, Laurito spent more than 10 minutes at a dead alarm box trying to call the firemen.

The interior of the two-story frame and stucco house was destroyed when firemen arrived. Forrest Bethune, a fireman, suffered severe burns while fighting the flames. The damage was estimated at $10,000.

PALM BEACH, Dec. 17.—"Jock McLean, son of Edward Beale McLean, millionaire Washington newspaper publisher, arrived with his parents for the winter. In "Jock's" baggage were 20 new tennis racquets. He is only 10, but was runner-up in the boys' tournament here last winter.

So that he may improve his game, his father has engaged Paul Heston, formerly assistant professional at the West Side Tennis Club at Forest Hills, Long Island, to look after young "Jock's" strokes and tennis generalship. Heston received $7,000 a year for this supervision. "Jock" is the only boy in the United States who has a tennis professional all to himself.

SPRING HILL HOMES :-: ENDANGERED :-: BY HASLAGE STREET SLIDE

NINE HOUSES SLIDING OVER HILL

Nine houses are sliding over the hill as a result of recent rains loosening the foundation under Haslage street and washing out the fill underneath the paving. Above is shown one of the houses, the front of which has settled and the foundation moved out nearly a foot.

FOUNDATIONS CRACKING UNDER STRAIN

At the rear of the Kessler home at 929 Haslage street, the foundation has settled, opening a large crack in the cement blocks. Miss Lillian Kessler, her father, Herman Kessler, and brother, Edward Kassler, are shown above pointing to the damaged foundation.

PORCHES EAR COLLAPSE

The porch on the R. J. McIntyre home is about ready to collapse. McIntyre is preparing to move his family as the danger of the slipping increases.

PAVEMENT CREVICE GROWING

City building inspectors are making an inspection to determine whether any of the houses are in immediate danger. Residents asserted the slide is the result of a fill made in the street when it was paved last September. A growing crevice has developed along the curb as the slide continues.

CONGRESS MINE STRIKE PROBE TO BE DEMANDED

MAY ASK REED TO ACT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—United Mine Workers' chiefs were expected today to confer again with Senator Reed (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, in an effort to have introduced into the Senate a resolution calling for a congressional investigation of the coal situation.

Supported by the American Federation of Labor, mine union officials will seek the investigation to ascertain whether railroads have conspired to keep down coal prices so as to defeat efforts to end by conciliation the bituminous strike in West Virginia, Western Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Edgar Wallace, legislative representative of the A. F. of L., and George Lewis, brother of John L. Lewis, mine workers' chief, conferred with Reed yesterday.

In the meantime, Secretary of Labor Davis may decide to follow the suggestion offered by mine workers and bituminous operators at his coal conference this week to ask the Senate for a special arbitration board to settle the eight months' strike.

stores and known to her associates as the "Princess."

The attorney also said Kresge was with Miss Fish in Natick last August.

Max D. Steuer, Kresge's counsel, said the merchant is agreeable to a divorce, but makes a general denial of his wife's charges, which were described by Steuer as efforts at "brow beating." "I want to be rid of her. I want to be free," an affidavit by Kresge said in reference to his wife.

Kresge is worth $365,000,000, despite large sums he has given to charitable causes, counsel for his wife asserted, arguing that the wife of so rich a man must be allowed to live up to her position.

Steuer said the merchant had settled upon his wife stock in the Kresge company, now worth more than $2,000,000, in a pre-nuptial agreement in lieu of dower rights. Mrs. Kresge claims to have used up all her income for the last two years and $100,000 besides in legal battles with her husband. She needs an allowance for counsel fees, her attorney said, and asks $25,000. She is asking no alimony.

NATICK, Mass., Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Denial was made by Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Fish of this town that their daughter, Gladys Ardelle Fish, had been caught in a New York apartment with Sebastian S. Kresge, as charged by counsel for Mrs. Kresge in her divorce proceedings. They asserted that the young woman and Kresge were "mere friends," having met each other through attendance at the same church in New York.

Mr. Fish said that Gladys had been working in New York as a secretary for the last two years.

Mr. and Mrs. Fish said that Kresge had made one visit to their home. While on an automobile trip in New England last summer he and his nephew called to see Gladys, who was at home for a vacation. They stayed over night and the next day took Gladys and her mother for a ride to York Beach, Me., to visit Gladys' sister, who was spending the summer there.

CHURCH WORKER

The young woman is known here as an accomplished pianist and an active church worker. The Rev. Walter Healey, pastor of the Fiske Methodist Church, which she formerly attended, said she was "one of the finest girls and best workers in the church—a sweet, innocent girl."

GUILTY AS BANK ROBBER

REBECCA BRADLEY ROGERS

LA GRANGE, Tex., Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Mrs. Rebecca Bradley Rogers was found guilty by a jury here today of robbing the Farmers National Bank of Buda, Tex., and was sentenced to 14 years in prison.

SEE PERIL IN NORTH SIDE SLIDE

City building inspectors are making a survey of nine houses in Haslage street, Spring Hill, said to be in danger of slipping over a cliff as a result of a landslide brought about by the recent heavy rains. Three of the houses are without water; gas and sewer connections are in danger of breaking, and foundations, some of them less than a year old, are settling as the street and pavement move out slowly.

Haslage street was paved last September and residents claim the slide is the result of a fill made along a stretch of several hundred feet. The home of Robert J. McIntyre, 927 Haslage street, has moved nearly two feet and McIntyre and his family are preparing to move out.

Another house, apparently in danger, is the home of Miss Lillian Kessler, 929 Haslage street. This house is only a year and a half old, and the foundation at the rear has opened several inches.

Building inspectors are expected to order several houses vacated, upon completion of their investigation today.

PRACTICES OF LAWYER CENSURED

Insinuation concerning an unnamed attorney is made in a letter to Federal Judge W. H. S. Thomson from United States District Attorney John D. Meyer, recommending a parole for Robert Crystal, alias "Red" Crystal, a former Turtle Creek saloonkeeper, who, last June, was sentenced to 14 months in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, but managed to keep from going by filing appeals for a new trial.

Attached to a three-year parole signed yesterday by Judge Thomson, is Mr. Meyer's letter of recommendation, which, in part, reads:

"I am asking this recommendation by reason of the manner in which Crystal has been treated by his attorney in the original trial. I have very definite and exact information concerning the conduct of this man towards his client."

CAUGHT IN "SHAKE DOWN"

Crystal was convicted in February with Jesse King, a former state policeman, and Joseph L. Flavin, a former Federal prohibition agent, of conspiring to impersonate government prohibition agents and "shaking down" saloonkeepers. King and Flavin are now serving prison sentences. Mr. Meyer declined to make public the identity of the attorney referred to in the letter or the nature of any irregularity or unethical procedure on the part of any of the several attorneys who have represented Crystal since his arrest.

The unusual reason for the parole recommendation caused much comment among attorneys.

Assistant United States District Attorney Ralph H. Smith, who prosecuted Crystal and the other defendants, said he was surprised to learn of such disposition of Crystal's sentence, but declined to make any further comment as the recommendation, he said, was handled personally by Mr. Meyer.

After the imposition of sentences Crystal and King sought new trials and when refused by the district court, King surrendered himself for commitment, but Crystal appealed to the United States Circuit Court. He failed to prosecute the appeal on the date set for a hearing ,and was granted an extension of time and the matter was still pending before the higher court when his most recent counsel, Edward Coll, brought up the question of a parole and with Mr. Meyer discussed it in the chambers of Judge Thomson.

Rollo H. McBride, superintendent of the Parting of the Ways Home, was designated probation officer for Crystal, to whom the latter must report at stated intervals.

MERCEDES KEMP.

Arrested in Chicago, Mercedes Kemp, 19, admitted she had stolen between 50 and 60 automobiles in the Illinois city during the past year. She said she and "the boy friend," Ray Feager, also held, cleared close to $10,000 through their car-stealing activities. "I stole 'em, he sold 'em," she told police. They are being held under $10,000 bail each.

SECOND QUEBEC SCHOOL BURNS

QUEBEC, Dec. 17.—(INS.)—The St. John Berchman Boarding School was a mass of ruins today, the second educational institution to be razed by fire here in the last 48 hours. There were 142 boys asleep in the boarding school when the fire started in the basement last night, but all of them were on the first floor of the building and escaped uninjured.

With the terrible disaster at the Hospice St. Charles Wednesday night still fresh in their minds, 300 men besieged the boarding house when the fire started, breaking windows and fighting to gain admittance in order to rescue the youngsters. The men in charge of the school led the boys to safety in an orderly manner, however, and no one was injured.

PRISON FOR WHITLATCH WIDOW

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Dec. 17.—A verdict of manslaughter was returned late yesterday by the jury in the case of Mrs. Ina L. Whitlatch, who has been on trial here for the last week on a charge of murdering her husband, William R. Whitlatch.

The jury received the case shortly after 3 o'clock and advised the tipstaff about 5:15 o'clock that a verdict had been reached.

As A. M. Dinsmore, the foreman, read the verdict, Mrs. Whitlatch, who was standing facing the jury, showed little or no emotion and resumed her seat quietly and without evidence of nervousness.

A few minutes later she left the court room with Sheriff H. M. Reynolds, and a woman attendant.

The jury included three women. Two ballots were taken. The verdict was a compromise. It carries a sentence of from 6 to 12 years.

NEW YORK AMERICAN "CHIEF" TESTIFIES

E. D. Coblentz, editor of the New York American, told the Senate committee investigating the Mexican anti-U. S. Nicaraguan plot that he had been greatly impressed with the authenticity of the documents which brought about the probe after their publication in Hearst papers.

NAMED IN MEXICAN RECORDS

Senator William Borah, of Idaho, appeared before the committee vigorously to deny he had received money which documents showed the Mexican government had ordered paid him.

MEXICAN COUNSEL GENERAL TALKKS

Arturo M. Elias, consul general of Mexico, was an important witness. Following his testimony the Reed committee ordered telegraph companies subpenaed to produce copies of correspondence between Elias and Mexican and Nicaraguan leaders.

Grove City high school, situated in the pretty little Mercer county town of 6,000 population, claims a record which will be difficult to surpass. In its high school are 10 sets of twins, five of girls, two of boys and three mixed. The twins, each diagonally below his or her mate, are, left to right, Donald and Dorothy Hepler, Harold and Claire McDougall, Janice Beatty and Janet Beatty Robinson, Janet having been adopted by a family named Robinson, Helen and Hazel Mariacher, Annabelle and Isabelle Sisley, Leah and Lois Burtner, Robert and Richard McCullough, Agnes and Archie Glasgow, Sarah and Tirzah Williamson and Verdette and Verda Patterson.

KIDNAPER INVADES SCHOOL

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—A father and a mother, broken by the torture of hours of suspense, today offered "anything—anything at all"—that would bring back 12-year-old Marion Parker, who was kidnaped, Thursday, from her schoolroom in a Los Angeles junior high school.

That the price of the girl's return would be money was indicated in a telephone call received last night by the father, Perry M. Parker, assistant cashier of a Los Angeles bank.

PROMISES MONEY

A husky voice which purported to be that of the kidnaper, asked Parker over the telephone if he were "a Christian gentleman enough to pay money" if the child were brought home.

"The money will be thrown out of a window if my little girl is placed on the front porch," the father replied.

The banker sat for hours in his darkened home with a roll of money in his hand waiting in vain for the return of his child.

It was not until after hours of waiting that he told a few friends of the message he had received. Although he said he meant to continue his vigil, he declared he had little hope left.

EXTENSIVE MAN-HUNT

In the meantime hundreds of police officers of Southern California were engaged in what was described as one of the most extensive manhunts in the history of Southern California. Newspapers and radio carried descriptions of the girl and the man who called for her at her school Thursday, declaring he wished to take her to her father, who had been injured in an accident.

Suspects have been taken into custody by the police for questioning, but each in turn has been released.

MARTINS FERRY MILLS, FLOODED, CLOSED

High water has forced suspension of work in most of the Martins Ferry mills. The mill workers' homes, too, are in the heart of the flood section. Workmen are shown here moving their household furnishings to higher grounds in a rowboat.

COLD SNAP CHECKS FLOOD

The second rise in the local rivers reached a crest early today of 24.6 feet, four-tenths foot below the flood mark, and this afternoon had fallen below 23 feet, with a cold snap and clear skies hastening the fall of both the Allegheny and Monongahela.

A four-inch fall of snow yesterday blanketed the Allegheny basin and absorbed much surface water, thus preventing the rivers here from reaching the anticipated flood stage a second time, Forecaster W. S. Brotzman said.

The weather bureau reported a low temperature of 19 degrees at 8 o'clock this morning with many outlying districts recording two or three degrees below that mark.

Clear weather was reported this morning all the way to the Rocky Mountains with little change in temperature. Pittsburghers will enjoy a clear, crisp Sunday, the weather man said.

VARE BESTING ILLNESS

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—The condition of United States Senator-elect William S. Vare, who has been confined to his bed since Wednesday with an attack of grip, was reported improved today. He still has a fever, but it has started to recede slowly, according to his physician. The latest temperature reported was 102.

"Of course Senator Vare is a sick man," said Dr. Ellwood R. Kirby, his physician, "but there are no complications that would indicate anything more than a bad case of influenza."

ORDER MINERS EVICTED

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 17.—(AP.)—More than 100 union miners' families in Belmont and Jefferson counties will have to move from the companies houses next April 1, according to a decision of Federal Judge Benson W. Hough, who, in Federal court here today, granted an eviction order asked by the companies.

The eviction order affects all miners sought to be evicted by the companies except those living in company houses at the No. 2 mine of the Clarkson Coal Mining Company. The court refused the order there, because the mine is not operating and there appeared to be no immediate need by the company for the houses to shelter non-union workers.

SHOPLIFTER PAYS TO SATISFY CONSCIENCE

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., Dec. 17.—A self-imposed fine of 41 cents was paid by a conscious-stricken shopper for the theft of merchandise. A Christmas shopper mailed to R. E. Siebold, manager of a local store, $2 in payment for merchandise valued at $1.50, which had been taken several days ago.

Lindy Shows Will He Can Fly Even Mexican Plane

MEXICO CITY, Mex., Dec. 17.—Just been flying over the city with Lindy in a Mexican plane. It don't make any difference to that baby what the nationality or the breed of the plane is, as long as it's got a propeller. He is going to take up President Calles and also Obregon. He says he is going to stay here till after Christmas, so he won't have to buy all his friends back home presents.

WILL ROGERS

I think he will go to some of the other South American republics from here and then make Cuba. Lindy says they take him to a show to watch the Spanish girls dance and then everybody gets around him and talks to him so much he can't see her.

So Tom Heflin is finally getting Republican ideas.

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

Many Bid For Clarence Brown's Services, But Famous Director Signs New Contract With M. G. M.

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service

IT WAS no easy matter for Irving Thalberg to persuade Clarence Brown to put his John Hancock on a contract and remain with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Mr. Brown was in the enviable position of having every company in the business bidding for his services and he was in no hurry to make up his mind.

Days and weeks went by and still Mr. Brown refused to commit himself. The man who brought John Gilbert and Greta Garbo together in "Flesh and the Devil" and whose "Trail of '98" is M. G. M.'s masterpiece for 1928, could afford to be independent. He was in a position to dictate. But yesterday he put aside all other offers and signed a long term contract with M. G. M.

The chances are he will not direct Greta Garbo in "Heat." He has other ideas and plans, and it is my private and personal opinion he will come pretty near getting what he wants. He begins work in six weeks and at this writing it seems likely he will direct "The World's Illusion," with Ramon Navarro.

"The world's Illusion" has been in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer family for lo, these many days. It was purchased for Rex Ingram, who had elaborate plans for its production. But now that Mr. Ingram has become a Mede and decided the life of a sculptor is preferable to that of a director—well, he will no longer need Wasserman's novel.

Janet Gaynor and Winfield Sheehan have patched their differences and the little girl who came to fame in "Seventh Heaven" and "Sunrise" remains a Fox star. At least, I hear from excellent authority Miss Gaynor will not walk out when she finishes "Lady Cristalinda" as everyone expected she would do. Her grievance was not aimed personally at the general manager and vice-president of the Fox Company, but was rather a refusal to continue work at the low salary she was supposed to be receiving. I believe she signed her present contract when she was under age and now that she has achieved fame she wants remuneration in proportion to her worth as an actress. F. W. Murnau probably was the peacemaker in this case, for he said that he wanted her as his leading lady in "Four Devils." And after "Sunrise" you can easily see that he will get what he wants.

The former Imogene Wilson, now known as Mary Logan, seems in a fair way to become very well known in pictures this coming year. As soon as she finishes playing opposite Reginald Denny in "Be Yourself" she will prepare for "Grease Paint," the next Conrad Veidt production. Playing opposite Mr. Veidt is an experience most rising young actresses would appreciate. He is one of our finest actors and a man who knows his craft as few players. "Grease Paint," to be supervised by Paul Kohner, is by Svend Gade, and is now being put into scenario form by J. Grubb Alexander. Mr. Veidt starts work shortly after "The Man Who Laughs" is completed.

Any hankering for the stage can be satisfied by Warner Brothers' stars through the medium of Vitaphone. Yesterday, Irene Rich made a one-act sketch called "The Beast," destined primarily for vaudeville houses. Barry Townley, who wrote the act, and John Miljohn supported her. It will be a new sensation for the theater-goers throughout the country to hear their favorite stars speaking to them through this mechanical device. It may prove an overwhelming success and again it may not. It depends, I suppose, upon the personality of the actor and how well his voice registers.

You need only a good pair of eyes and an active imagination when you are writing a column. I saw Hobart Henley walking about the Paramount lot and chatting with this and that executive and I made up my mind he was there for some purpose. His purpose, it seems, is to talk contract, with a view to directing George Bancroft's next picture.

Roland West has everything for the "Purple Mask" but a star. This play of early England when knights were bold, Mr. West believes needs just the right type to carry it. Leo Dietrichstein was delightful in the leading role on the stage and now the search is on to get an actor who can do as well. There is one person, of course, that looms up largely in Mr. West's mind and that is Douglas Fairbanks, but since Mr. Fairbanks usually make his own pictures, there isn't much chance in his being starred in "The Purple Mask." Come to think of it, this is a role just made to order for Doug.

One Answer -:- Hungry Eyes -:- Chic -:- Not a Zebra

ALICE ADAIR, having her "picture took" beside her swell car, illustrates another cause why girls run away to Hollywood—and dish-washing, if they're lucky enough to get a job at it.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN is a great actor and in this scene from his new picture, "The Circus," his eyes and general attitude tell a story that could not be plainer if he were speaking his thoughts.

SALLY O'NEIL, M-G-M star, and her sports frock show what the flicker flappers wear in sunny California.

ON THE OTHER HAND, Aileen Pringle, another M-G-M star, shows what they wear when it is not sunny. This blizzard kimona is of chinchilla and it is called an evening wrap.

Bird House Cash Prize Contest Ends Today

Today's the day—the last day that girls and boys of the Bird House Club can turn in New Reader subscriptions to The Sun-Tele, to profit in the extra cash prizes.

J. M. Aylward, manager of the Bird House Club, will record on his big tabulation sheet every subscription received before 6 o'clock tonight. And then, as soon as the totals are made up, the names of the 24 winners of the prizes will be known.

The Bird House Department will close at 6. And that hour will mark the closing of the 30 contests for the prizes. There will be bonuses of 50 cents a subscription—the usual award—made for all those blanks that come in after that timt, but they will not be counted in the prize money.

Rush yours in now. There's time—even if only a few hours.

Bach's Oratorio To Be Given Sunday

In lieu of the usual free organ recital, Dr. Caspar Koch, city organist, has engaged the Choir Ensemble Society for a production of Bach's Christmas Oratorio to be given at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Twenty numbers of the oratorio will be sung by the choir of 36 voices and a quartet. The soloists are Christine Turk Pettican, soprano; Marie Mushrush Needham, contralto; Arthur Davis, tenor; E. Clair Anderson, bass. Mrs. J. R. MacGregor will play the piano part and Dr. Koch the organ part. Lyman Almy Perkins is the conductor.

Preceding the oratorio, Dr. Koch will play Bach's canonic variation on the Christmas hymn, "From Heaven on High I Come to Thee." He will also play the Pastoral Symphony of Bach as transcribed for the organ by Karg-Elert.

Insull's Wife's Theater Guild Collapses

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—Mrs. Samuel Insull announced the passing of her repertoire theater company, hardly midway in its second season at the Studebaker. It will be disbanded three weeks hence when the players will have completed the four weeks' revival of "Mr. Pim Passes By."

Expensive operation, hard luck in the selection of plays and apathy on that part of the public which was always talking about duplicating the New York Theater Guild in Chicago, are accountable for the costly failure of Mrs. Insull's plucky enterprise.

MORLEY TELLS SECRETS OF MAYAN CIVILIZATION

Amazing facts about the oldest civilization in the new world were discussed by Dr. Sylvanus G. Morley, noted archaeologist, last evening in Carnegie Museum Lecture Hall. By excavation at Chichen Itza in the peninsula of Yucatan the old Mayan capital has been unearthed. The most difficult question to answer said Dr. Morley, is that of the relation of Mayan civilization to the ancient civilization of the old world, with which it shows strange similarities. The precision of the astronomy of the Maya period is particularly astonishing. The Carnegie Institute expedition discovered a colossal sun-dial on which certain lines marked the point of the rising sun on the two solstices and a third line pointed to the true east with surprising accuracy.

The Art Society gave its third recital in Carnegie Music Hall last night. Some disappointment was felt when Bonelli was suddenly taken ill, but William Simmons, baritone, was a good substitute and soon gained the attention and respect of the audience. Approaching holidays and weather doubtless kept many away. It is to be hoped their interest will awaken with the new year, the remaining concerts in this series being especially fine.

Simmons sang a conventional program of some merit however. His singing is never brilliant, but he has a good style and each of his songs has the mark of real finish. His voice is not unusual in quality, somewhat thin in the higher register, otherwise warm and true. His breathing permits beautiful classic phrasing as well as comedy effects which are never taken beyond the limits of good taste.

Of his program I should choose the Handel airs and the modern English songs as his best work. The German songs formed a perfect group but Simmons' style is not sufficiently profound to give them their fullest musical or dramatic significance. Solon Alberti again played accompaniments. There were several encores; Rachmaninoff's "When Night Is Sent" and a spiritual were quite pleasing.

Love Shifts Likely All For the Best

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

PART of the allurement of infatuation is the belief that it will last. It seems incredible that such rosy enchantment can ever fade "into the light of common day." Yet letters reach me in every mail, asking in substance: "Why did his love change?" or, "How could she tire of me when we were so happy as sweethearts!"

Perfect love knows "neither change nor shadow of changing." But human love is seldom, if ever quite perfect. For that reason, it is wise to test love by time and absence as well as companionship, before undertaking "love and honor," "until death do us part."

"Dear Miss Fairfax," writes "Undecided." "When I was 16 and about to go away to school I became engaged to a young man with whom I had fallen deeply in love.

"Later I changed schools and met another man. We are classmates, and have been sweethearts now for almost two years. I have been more in his company than in that of my fiance, whom I have not seen for nearly four years. But he still writes, and he wishes to marry me next summer. The other young man also proposed recently and is waiting for his answer.

"I feel sometimes that I love him more than I do my fiance. Please help me."

"Henry presents another angle of changeable love—the hurt bewilderment of the man who feels his sweetheart is drifting from him.

"Dear Miss Fairfax," he writes, "I have been associating with a girl who is good and respectable—oh, to make it short, the best little girl there is, in my estimation. I have known many, but not one who appeals as she does.

"Although she is of a different religion, I offered to give up my religion when I proposed to her.

"For a time things looked very promising. Then I went away to another city to work. I sent her a birthday letter and gift. Whenever I could I went to the city where she lives to see her.

"Her letters began to grow more infrequent. I wrote to ask her why. She claimed she wrote and the letter was lost in the mail.

"Finally she wrote that on account of the difference in our religions she thought it best we should be just friends. I know that is only an excuse, because she had told me religion made no difference.

"Please tell me why she changed just when everything seemed all right and we were going to be happily married. There seems to be no hope."

I am sorry you are so disappointed, Henry. And I am sorry, also, for that other fiance, whom "Undecided" will hurt by breaking her engagement.

For that is what is likely to happen. "Undecided" became engaged at 16. Nearly four years have passed without her seeing her fiance. She is interested now in another man. It is not likely she will go on with the marriage under the circumstances.

A broken engagement is unfortunate. But a loveless marriage would be infinitely worse for all concerned. It is a great mistake for very young girls to become engaged, because young girls—and very young men also—are changeable, with new ideas and fresh viewpoints about what is worth while each succeeding year. It is a mistake for young people to become engaged until they can see their way plainly to getting married, within a reasonable time—say a year or six months.

After all, friendships and courtships of young people are conditional and experimental. They are an opportunity of becoming better acquainted. When a new face comes along or ardor cools down from the quick blaze of first interest and infatuation, there should be perfect freedom to transfer this interest to another, to let friendship settle down to friendly interest. Try to be fair, accepting any disappointment involved with good sportsmanship. Be a good loser.

If love dies, do not marry even though this means breaking your engagement. It is wiser not to plunge headlong into ardent courtships and engagements. But having done so, if sober second thought disapproves the match, withdraw while there is yet time. Because the purpose of courtship and betrothal is to avoid premature, unwise, hasty marriages.

Should your love affair fail, or love prove changeable, have faith that if you yourself continue to be lovable and desirable, when the really-congenial life-partner comes along, there will no longer be doubts or change of heart, but sound friendship, unwavering love and loyalty despite all difficulties, throughout courtship, betrothal, and the long years of successful marriage.

JOY OF JOYS:— to Have Lunch with a Man Who Has a Baby, Too!

DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley

IN a joyful mood, when the silver lining shows, a fellow can count up on his spread fingers and not have enough for them all, quite a showing of wonderful and worth-while things to be grateful for!

His work—for there are other fellows who haven't any.

His wife—for those that some other unlucky fellows have are priced, not "above rubies," but at the rate of snythetic ones.

His beautiful baby—for it has a "good brain" and is, oh so much smarter and sweeter than most people's babies. And besides, he knows a fellow whose little child is gone, its tiny feet treading away beside those soundless ones of the Death Angel, its tiny hand in one of hers. How grateful he is that HIS is safe asleep in its bed when he clicks open his front door tonight!

Well—and his home—for it IS a home, even if it is tiny, and he can look at trees from his dinner table at night, and his baby has a gate of its own to swing on.

His automobile—ah, ah, it isn't one of the high-priced ones, but he PASSES them, and it's a great picnicker and its name is Cleopatra!

There are no mortgages, no debts, everybody's well, and the little car runs. 'URRAY! All serene.

All these are joys, you betcha. But there are some little ones, peculiar ones, unexpected ones, that everybody has had a gift of once in a while, that seem to be the creme de la creme of gratification.

And one of them is to have lunch with a fellow who "HAS A BABY, TOO!" Oh, unspeakable satisfaction. You KNOW you do not bore him. And he certainly doesn't bore you. And he knows it. For how you both understand! Just the shine in his eyes and the delighted wag of his head is the very way YOU FEEL. And just as fast as either one of you gets through telling about what his baby did, the other fellow tells what HIS baby did. And then they both laugh insanely together.

Who has this experience save the two who have one? A fellow can't be himself about his baby with a man who never had one; unless he be that rare person who really understands and cares for the whole race of children. And there be such! But the one who doesn't. A fellow can't make his lunch-hour a festa for a baby that he does not care for and perhaps never saw. So a fellow must bury certain seething thoughts and boastings. He must burst with pride and yet keep it under cover.

But when he can overflow, and watch with understanding the pride of another father in the same state, then he goes home and tells a little wife who asks, "What did you do today?" that he "had a GREAT time at lunch. Liked it better than any in a long time. Had lunch with Dan. HE'S got a baby, too! A little boy. We had a great talk."

And his wife, knowing why the talk was what it was had to laugh. And she heard with delight what Dan's little boy had done, and with pride the things that John had contributed about their little girl.

SAYINGS OF MRS. SOLOMON

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE SEVEN DEADLY MEN

BEHOLD, my Daughter, there be Seven Deadly Men, from whom all women pray to be delivered.

Lo, as too much paprika in the salad, as a flashlight in the eyes, as a new towel to a tender chin, so is a Hot Air Artist. He filleth the room as a loud speaker. He starreth himself continuously. He causeth the conversation to become static. And life beside him, is as a tete-a-tete with a riveting machine.

HELEN ROWLAND

As a second-hand flivver on a detour, as a telegram at midnight, as hot soup down the back of a decollete gown, so is a Caveman! He is SO sudden. He jarreth the nerves and shattereth the sensibilities. For what women delighteth to be stunned and mauled and choked into love? Verily, a woman's heart is covered with a tender skin, and her vanity is easily punctured. And above all things, she desireth a GENTLE wooer.

* * *

As stimulating as a reducing diet, as flattering as a cheap mirror, so is a Masculine Reformer. He seeketh to "improve" a damsel in all her ways. He frowneth upon her laughter, and smileth not at her cuteness. He filleth her with an inferiority complex!

As a door that swingeth in the wind, as a window that rattleth continuously, as a table next the jazz-band, so is a Wise-Cracker. For a little merriment is good for the soul. But a man that seeketh to be a continuous vaudeville show weareth the spirit. He can NOT be put down!

As last year's popular song, as a joke without a point, as a long after-dinner speech, so is a Middle-Aged Sheik, that seeketh after petting and purseth flappers. Yea, he is as a warmed-over rarebit, wherefrom all the "snap" hath departed, and only the "goo" remaineth.

As vinegar to the teeth and grape-fruit in the eye, so is a Sophisticate. He looketh down from a Great Height. He speaketh as an Oracle. He seeketh to make thee feel small and worm-like. He impresseth the simple damsel, but the wise damsel hath his number. At sight of him, she saith, "Ho-hum!"

* * *

As too much brilliantine upon the hair, as a heavy perfume in a close room, so is a Woman-Tamer. Yea, as a loose board in the steps, he lieth in wait for every damsel, and NO woman escapeth him. As a musical clock, he wooeth every woman with the same old love-tunes, and originality is not IN him. He sickeneth the soul! And only the foolish fall for him.

* * *

I charge thee, my Daughter, watch thy step, lest thou be ensnared by one of the Seven Deadly Men. For, even as the Seven Deadly Women, they are all abominations.

Knowing His Worth

By LUCY LOWELL

HAVE you ever stopped to consider how much true worth there is in people generally, and how ignorant of it many of them are?

If you can say the word—perform the small action—to awaken them to this splendid thing they have, you will have done both humanity and yourself a benefit, for what lifts one lifts all.

"What a man most wishes," wrote Emerson, "is to be lifted to some higher platform, that he may see beyond his present fear the transalpine good, so that his fear, his coldness, his custom, may be broken up like fragments of ice melted and carried away in the great stream of good will."

He goes on:

"Let a man then know his worth, and keep things under his feet. Let him not peep or steal, or sulk up and down with the air of a charity-boy or an interloper, in the world which exists for him.

"But the man in the street, finding no worth in himself which corresponds to the force which built a tower or sculptured a marble god, feels poor when he looks on these.

"To him a palace, a statute or a costly book has an alien and forbidding air, much like a gay equipage, and seems to say, like that, 'Who are you, sir?'

"Yet they are all his, suitors for his notice, petitioners to his faculties that they will come out and take possession. The picture waits for my verdict; it is not to command me, but I am to settle its claims to praise."

Not many of us, of course, have the ability to express this as did Emerson. But all of us can tell ourselves how simple a thing it is to do or say the small thing—a word often will do—which will awaken another to a sense of his own vast possessions.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

by Royal S. Copeland M.D.
U.S. Senator from New York

Air, Light and Good Food Banish the Plague.

SOMETIMES we get discouraged. In spite of everything we do there may be sickness in the family. Some days we feel weak and unable to work.

But the fact is, real progress is being made in the control and wiping out of disease. In tuberculosis, for instance, we have an example of the forward march of good health. Science has every reason to be encouraged because of what has been accomplished in lowering the death rate from this dread disease.

DR. COPELAND

Forty years ago in New York City 49 persons out of every 10,000 of the population died from tuberculosis. It does not exceed one quarter of that today.

Thousands of persons are alive and well who would have died of this disease a generation ago. Indeed, in the control of tuberculosis medicine has its most encouraging record.

To most of us this disease is known as "T. B." This is derived from the name of the germ responsible for tuberculosis the "tubercle bacillus."

There can be no real tuberculosis in the absence of the germ. There may be suspicious symptoms and the fear of infection, but without the T. B. germ there is no tuberculosis.

Germs are like the seeds of plants. Unless there is a favorable soil the germs cannot take root, certainly they cannot thrive.

To give the T. B. germ its devastating opportunity, the way must be prepared. Run down health is the underlying cause in most cases.

What causes the health to decline? Loss of sleep and excessive fatigue—perhaps they come first. That is, habitual loss of sleep and almost daily overwork—to be worn out all the time—these are the conditions which lead to disaster.

Undernourishment from lack of food, or a weakened body from the eating of wrong foods, is another cause for a decline in health. This prepares the way for infection with the germ of tuberculosis.

Bad housing is another factor which must be regarded as one of the most serious. Poorly ventilated, sunless, dusty houses are breeding places for these germs. Fresh air and bright sunshine are death to them. A person can ill afford to live in the wrong sort of home.

Whenever I see a white-faced, pale-lipped, narrow-shouldered, narrow-chested young girl, I begin to worry about her at once. Deep breathing, walks in the bright sunshine, nourishing food, an abundance of sleep in a well-ventilated room—these are essential to her escape from infection.

There is no mystery about the way to escape tuberculosis. It consists in leading the simple life, eating simple foods, living close to Nature.

The things which everybody should do every day in order to have good health, are the very things and the only things you need to do to escape tuberculosis.

Answers to Health Queries.

A. R. Q.—What is the cause of a red nose in a girl in her early teens? What will relieve the condition?

B. J. W. Q.—How should a house be fumigated after influenza?

2.—Consult a veterinarian.

R. M. Q.—What causes patches of white on the skin on different parts of the body? There is no irritation.

A.—Probably due to loss of pigment or coloring matter—nothing serious. There is no specific treatment indicated but staining the parts with a light coating of walnut juice will help to make them less conspicuous.

H. F. B. Q.—What are the symptoms of nerve exhaustion and is there a cure? I am extremely nervous and never sleep—therefore have to resort to sleeping tablets. Have had T. B. for five years, and the nervous condition tends to aggravate my condition in general. My heart palpitates. Would the Violet Ray treatment be helpful?

A.—If you have lots of fresh air and sunshine, careful, nourishing diet, proper rest and sleep, avoidance of worry and anxiety and your system is kept clear your nerves should benefit and your condition in general improve. Why not have your doctor advise the further treatment you need?

The Child's Imagination

By L. LAMAR MATTHEWS

MAXINE used to be a dreamy-eyed little girl who played alone most of the time and whose imagination worked overtime.

She could give a musical concert all by herself, and her dolls were just as good an audience as she desired. She made up senseless words to useless songs and sang them with great lifting of the head and trembling of the voice. Her piano solos were marvels of shoulder-shaking and hand-lifting.

She sat on the back steps and sailed miles across the sea with delightful companions whom her imagination brought into the game.

She walked abroad with her mother's parasol held coquettishly over herself and another admiring person whom nobody could see but Maxine.

More and more the child lived within herself. The real things of life were transformed into whatever she wanted them to be by the simple magic of her imagination.

She was passive, inert, impractical. She never knew where she had left her belongings; she waited for some one else to help her dress. She never volunteered to dust the books or set the table or answer the telephone, or do any of the things that sweet little girls find to do for other people at home. She was fast developing into one of those wandering souls whose vague ideas keep them from ever getting anywhere.

It was Maxine's grandfather who brought about the change in her existence. Grandfather was a teacher in his younger days; and he keeps in touch with modern progress.

"That child needs something practical to think about and something definite to do," he said to Maxine's mother.

So the next day he took her to the park and let her see the animals. He called her attention to people and to happenings along the way. And when she returned home he induced her to tell her mother what she had seen.

Every day for several weeks, he carried his grand-daughter to places of interest and centers of activity. And then he encouraged her to put her experiences into words.

He persuaded his daughter to give the child a few definite tasks and to require her to perform them every day.

What Maxine needed was contact with the realties of life and a lesson in taking responsibility. And thanks to grandfather's influence upon her and upon her mother she got it.

Maxine no longer sits in school gazing ahead at nothing at all. She no longer stands to one side of the playground, watching her schoolmates at their play. She no longer seems a helpless, useless mite of humanity.

Of course, she has not changed completely in so short a time. But she is making an effort, and that is more than could be said of her previous to grandfather's visit.

There is nothing amiss in a child using her imagination.

Imagination is a gift of the gods and only an ignorant parent or guardian would seek to destroy that wonderful faculty. But when the vagaries of imagination are permitted to dominate the child's whole procedure it is then that it becomes a hindrance.

Some teachers and parents find ways and means of harnessing that vivid imagination and applying it to lessons at school or tasks at home.

For the Lovelorn

By ELEANOR GALE

What Shall I Do?

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am going to place my problem before you. Last year I was what you would call a "fast type," but I've changed completely in the course of a few months.

Now, Miss Gale, I have met the boy I love dearly and have the greatest respect for him. But news sure does travel quickly. He has heard that I was a fast type, he shouldn't go with me and the like. Of course, he believes these false, and I told him they were, because I just can't tell him they are true. What shall I do, Miss Gale?

Do you really think if he loves me he will overlook these faults?

He does not believe them and if I keep on telling him they are false stories he will believe me. Oh, Miss Gale,

WHAT SHALL I DO?

Yours is a real problem, my dear, and I hope it's being printed here will warn other girls of trouble ahead. Only you, however, know this man well enough to be aware of how he would take such a confession, and it all depends on that. A few years ago I would, without qualification, have told you to confess to him, but I will modify that statement now by telling you to act according to the dictates of your own heart. If you feel that you can always live a lie and that he will never know, then there is no use in wrecking two lives. But—he may find out after you are married and that would be much worse.

Blue Eyes

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have been reading your column for some time, but this is the first time I have come to you for advice. Miss Gale, I have been going with a fellow for some time and he has told me he loves me and doesn't go with any other girls. Also he doesn't believe in smoking, drinking or petting. Now this is my trouble. I had a signet ring and this fellow took it off one finger and put it on the finger that means engagement. Could we consider ourselves as being engaged or not? Now that he has done that he thinks since we are engaged it would be all right to kiss me. Is it?

BLUE EYES.

That is a nice, easy way for him to get an engagement ring, isn't it, my dear? You are not engaged until he has asked you definitely to marry him and you have consented. Don't let him kiss you.

Lizzie

DEAR MISS GALE:

We have quarreled. Of course, everyone will think I mean with a boy friend. No. Worse than that. I have left home. Now, you will know that it was with my mother that I quarreled, I, Miss Gale, make a good living, and I can afford to live well, as I am now doing. Whenever I was at home I had to give every cent to my mother. She knows where I am and does not care whether I come home or not. We do not speak at all, and now comes the hard part. My boy friend still goes to my home every Wednesday and Saturday evening. Whether he expects me to come home or not I don't know. I am just burning up with fury, as I think he goes to see my younger sister. If he does, I can surely say he is robbing the cradle, for she is just 15. Miss Gale, I am 19 years old, and I am of French descent. I have large dark eyes, I am not conceited, and I cannot help but flirt. My boy friend was jealous, and we always quarreled over that. Now please, Miss Gale, what shall I do—go home and get back my boy friend or let him go and get another and continue living an independent life? Please tell me what you think of me, and I most cordially invite the comments of your readers.

LIZZIE.

I am quite sure you are wrong concerning your mother's state of mind just now, my dear. Go back home and patch things up. You will be much happier, I know.

Not Old-Fashioned

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have been reading your advice for just a short time, but like it real well. I am a girl in my teens and am in love with a boy who loves my girl friend. I went with him a while, but he started to go with this other girl and as he loves her, I know there's no chance for me. I am very fond of another boy whom I've only been with twice. He goes with no girls that I know of and seems to like me. But he is backward and shy. I know him real well, but would like to get better acquainted. I agree with you on the drinking question, but not the others. Some girls like to smoke and I see nothing wrong with it. As for kissing, that is up to the girl. It cheapens her to pet with every Tom, Dick and Harry. I have let only a few fellows kiss me—those whom have gone with me steady and whom I've really liked, but I don't believe in kissing every boy good night. Please excuse the long letter. Hoping to see it in print, I am,

NOT OLD FASHIONED.

Let the acquaintance ripen of its own accord, my dear. He seems to like you, so why worry. I am sorry you disagree with me about kissing.

Sorry

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a girl in my teens and a junior in high school. Here is my trouble. I am going with a very nice boy whom I love very much. Recently we attended a party where we petted and smoked. When we were coming home I asked him if he were disgusted with me for my actions. He said he wasn't and that he saw no harm in a girl smoking and petting if she pleased, but just the same since this party he treats me very coldly. Do you believe that he holds this against me? What does a boy think of a girl that smokes?

SORRY

Most boys tell a girl they like to see her smoke and that it is the right thing to do, but just the same they don't like it. Sometime it is hard to co-ordinate a boy's statements and his real feelings, but you can usually tell by his actions.

THEY HOPE TO SUCCEED WHERE OTHERS FAILED

The National League pennant race of 1928 will get under way with three new managers fighting the field, and there will be one change among the team leaders in the American League. All the new pilots are pictured herewith. Peckinpaugh steps in where angels fear to tread in Cleveland. He succeeds Jack McCallister, who succeeded Tris Speaker, and will have a new club management behind him, with Billy Evans, the former umpire, as the acting chief. Billy will be Peckinpaugh's buffer in the event the fans show an inclination to deprive him of a fair chance to make good. Shotten is the former assistant to Branch Rickey at St. Louis. He managed Syracuse in the International League last year and succeeds Stuffy McInnis, former Pirate first baseman, as manager of the Phils. His also is a tough job, as is that of Jack Slattery, who quit as coach of the Boston College nine to accept the tender to manage the Braves. Wilkinsburg Bill McKechnie, who will lead the St. Louis Cardinals, who came close to winning the pennant last year, has the rosiest prospects of the lot. He won the National League flag as manager of the Pirates in 1925, was fired as a result of internal trouble that ruined the club's chances in 1926 and last year hooked on as assistant to Bob O'Farrell at St. Louis. Following last season, it was decided to relieve O'Farrell of the managerial worries that interfered with his playing, and he will be a private in the ranks under McKechnie when the gong rings for the new campaign.

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

ANY doubt that may have existed among the friends of Rabbit Maranville in the Pittsburgh district as to the little fellow's chances of being retained by the St. Louis Nationals following the acquisition by the latter of Shortstop Jimmy Cooney from the Phillies, was speedily dispelled by Manager Bill McKechnie of the Redbirds upon his return to his Wilkinsburg home yesterday after attending the minor and major league meetings in Dallas and New York.

"Are we going to keep Maranville in St. Louis?" repeated McKechnie when asked about his plans for the Rabbit's future. "Well, you can just bet your life that we are. Regardless of the old infield material we had, or of the new man, Jimmy Cooney, or of any reductions we may make later in our supply of infield timber, Maranville is going to stay with the Cardinals next year.

"I FEEL sure that he still has a lot of big league baseball left in him and am confident that he will be very valuable to our club in many ways during 1928."

WHILE admitting the fielding ability of Cooney as a shortstop, Manager McKechnie appears to hold the opinion that Johnny lacks durability and can be depended upon for first-class work in the shortfield for only about two weeks at a stretch before he begins to slow down.

Perhaps Bill intends to place Cooney with one of the several minor league clubs owned by the Cardinal bosses and to rely upon Maranville when Tommy Thevenow is out of commission for any reason.

Certainly he will have to make some cut in his infield forces, for, as his roster stands at present, he has no fewer than four extra infielders

Tartans Suspend Court Practice Over Holidays

Carnegie Tech will wind its basketball practice today before starting the Christmas vacation. Floor activities will be suspended for 10 days. When Coach Irwin's cagers return the latter part of the month they will buckle down to work for the opening game of the season with Davis-Elkins College at Elkins, W. Va., January 6.

Coach Irwin is well satisfied with the sessions to date and feels confident the Tartans will be represented with a strong combination when the campaign gets under way.

CADET HEADS REFUSE CONTRACT FOR '28

By ROBERT A. HEREFORD,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—Athletic war between Army and Navy!

The first gun in the sports war which has been threatening between the United States Military Academy and the Naval Academy was fired last night by Maj. General Edwin B. Winans, superintendent of the Military Academy at West Point when he announced that he had returned unsigned to the Navy the contract calling for a football game in 1928 between the two institutions.

The act was regarded as a virtual severance of athletic relations between the two historic sports rivals, whose annual football battle has been regarded as the gridiron classic for the last 30 years.

The two institutions have been at daggers' points for several weeks in a dispute over eligibility rules, but because of the old rivalry involved, and the kindred interests of the two academies an early truce had been expected.

The bone of contention was the insistence by the Navy authorities that no player who has represented any other college on the gridiron should be allowed to lay for either of the two academies in the annual Army-Navy game. The feeling at the Naval Academy is well exemplified by a telegram sent home by a disgruntled Middy after the recent Army-Navy football contest. It read: "Navy, 9; Army, 0; Associated Colleges, 14."

The fact that Harry Wilson was allowed to play another full term at West Point after starring on Penn State's football eleven seven years

"Illinois Clean"—Prexy

ADDRESSING the Pittsburgh chapter of the Illinois Alumni Association at the Roosevelt Hotel last night, President David R. McKinley of the university told how Bob Zuppke built his "starless-star football team" at Illinois this year on a basis of strategy and self-sacrifice, and declared that as far as he knew, Illinois was free from paid athletes.

President McKinley told of the success gained by the Illini this past season, when the team won the Big Ten gridiron championship, and said that it was simply the fine spirit of the team, combined with co-operation and sacrifice on the part of the players that carried the eleven to the top.

Enlarging on the subject of clean athletics, Dr. McKinley stated that if the Carnegie Foundation, which is conducting an investigation of athletics in American colleges, found anything wrong at Illinois, that the school officials would want specific indications of evil, so that they might clean house.

PENN GRID SQUAD LEAVES FOR COAST

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Thirty-four strong, the University of Pennsylvania football squad entrained today for Berkeley, Cal., for the gridiron struggle with the University of California on New Year's eve. In addition to the players, about 30 others including trainers and coaches, were in the official party.

Chicago is the first scheduled stop of any length for the special train of eight cars.

TERRIER BENCH SHOW TODAY

More than 150 thoroughbreds are numbered among the canines on exhibition today in the first annual Boston terrier show, to be held in the Roof Garden of the Hotel Chatham, under the auspices of the Boston Terrier Club of Western Pennsylvania. Many valuable prizes are to be distributed to the winners.

Supt. Elizabeth McKee of Fayetteville, N. Y., is to bench the show. Vincent Perry of London, Canada, will be judge. Veterinarians in charge will be Drs. Glenn, Young and Barrett.

FOUL COSTS HIM TITLE

JOE GLICK

New York lightweight boxer who lost to Tod Morgan, junior lightweight champion, last night for the second time in a bout with the title at stake when he fouled the champion in the fourteenth round. Glick twice dropped Morgan with body punches before the finish and had a lead when he was disqualified. Morgan beat Glick a year ago in another titular battle, winning the decision.

THERE'S always some one to belittle the man who does things. For instance, there is the fellow who yesterday kicked in to me with the observation that Lindy isn't such a much.

"He just happens to be a good aviator with an exceptionally good plane. Give the same plane to any other good aviator and he'd do the same things Lindy has done," Mr. Belittler remarked.

How idiotic!

CHAMP WINS ON FOUL OVER JOE GLICK

By FRED KEATS
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—Tod Morgan, the junior-lightweight champion saved his crown by winning on a foul in the fourteenth round from Joe Glick in the Garden last night. In another championship event, Izzy Schwartz was awarded the flyweight championship for outpointing Newsboy Brown.

The Morgan-Glick scrap was a thriller every moment of the rounds. Morgan had taken counts of nine, once in the second and twice in the fifth rounds. Each time it was a body blow that put him on the canvas. In the fourteenth, he went down again from a right and left to the body and this time Referee Eddie Forbes decided to award the fight to the champion on a foul.

Morgan put up a strong claim of foul after the first knockdown and again after the first knockdown in the fifth. Neither blow appeared low to ringsiders and Tod showed that he was only acting by the speed with which he recovered his pep.

It looked very much as though Tod was looking for an easy way out in the early part of the fight, when things were going against him, but after that bad fifth round he began to do better and he was fast cutting down Glick's lead when the big blow-off came in the fourteenth.

FIND NO FOUL

Dr. William H. Walker, for the Boxing Commission, examined Morgan and announced that he could find no surface indications of a foul blow.

Glick started off with a rush and two left hooks to the head. He fol-

EASTERN SQUAD NOW COMPLETE

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 17.—(AP.)—The "All-Eastern" football team which is scheduled to clash with an "All-Western" squad at San Francisco in a charity game December 26, was completed here yesterday when Glenn Presnell and Ray Randels, University of Nebraska players joined the "all-stars."

Stopping for only a few minutes the players hustled out on the platform to face the icy gusts of almost zero weather.

Chet Wynne, coach at the University of Creighton, was here to meet his "baby brother," Elmer. Elmer was fullback on Notre Dame's team this fall and followed in the footsteps of Chet, a Notre Dame all-America player.

Herb Joesting, all-America fullback from Minnesota, was joined by his bride of a week ago who came from Minneapolis on a different train to accompany him on the trip.

Coach Andy Kerr, football coach from Washington and Jefferson stood aside and watched the players warming up in the brisk wind. "Nice bunch of boys" was his only comment.

Panthers Wallop Chicago

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—The great Western Conference is up on its ear this morning and it is noised about that Chicago gunmen are being mobilized to snap the winning streak of Pitt's Golden Panthers basketball squad. The Panthers walked away with the University of Chicago quintet last night and today they face the hardest test of their four-game campaign in Dutch Longberg's Northwestern Wildcats.

Northwestern has a gang of six-foot sharpshooters. They have a slashing, crashing offense that is going to trouble diminutive Stash Wrobleski and Suitcase Charley Hyatt. But the Panthers are setting their sights on tonight's game and they will be ready to give the Wildcats 40 minutes of hot action.

Chicago held Pitt even for the first three periods of the game last night, but the Panthers' offensive functioned properly in the final minutes of the

CHILLY SAUCE By CHILLY DOYLE

WITH so many of us yearning for more Pirate pitchers it is interesting to note that the outside baseball world has some qualified experts who have a wholesome fear of the Oakland sharpshooters in their present glory. Reference is made here to the righthanded batters in the Yankee lineup.

"THERE'S nothing wrong with those Pirate right-handers as far as I am concerned," was the declaration of Joe Dugan, Yank third-sacker, as he touched on the world's series. "Miljus and the rest of them showed us plenty. Their side-arm deliveries certainly had us guessing."

MILJUS, in particular, had a lot of stuff to back up his nervy display. When Gehrig and Meusel fanned with the bases loaded in the ninth inning of the final fight, they staggered about the plate like a fighter who had been belted on the jaw. And Tony Lazzeri was strictly on the defensive when the Miljus pitch rolled away from Gooch to let over the winning run.

MILJUS, Kremer, Meadows, Aldridge and Hill—what's the matter with that "fivesome?" About this time last year many of us sounded a warning about the slab staff, but it was good enough to win the flag. Miljus, however, being a welcome addition in the middle of the excitement.

Drury to Try Fortune In Movies

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Dec. 17.—Morley Drury, All-American football star of the University of Southern California, is to tread Red Grange's path into the movies. But the curly-haired Long Beach quarterback is not waiting several months after the football season to sign up as Grange did.

Drury has been taking screen tests for 10 days at Universal City. The tests turned out satisfactorily and Morley now has an attractive proposition to accept or reject, for a principal role in "The Collegians."

Drury is appearing in a local theater this week in his professional debut.

PANS TWO-TEAM PLAN

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—The two-team football argument still rages in the Western Conference, and the more Coach Zuppke, of Illinois, talks about it, the more critical he becomes. He told the Aurora alumni of Illinois last night that it was a "flabby idea," because men don't play football for exercise, but for "the drama and heroism of it."

SHOTS and PASSES by Julius Levin

THE J. J. Mieles, champions of the Pittsburgh and Ohio Valley League, removed another barrier from their path in their drive for the first-half championship last night when they defeated the Goldensons of the South Side in an extra-period battle at Columbus Temple, 35 to 33.

The victory marked the champions' sixth straight in the P. & O. League and safely entrenched them in first place.

The contest drew a capacity crowd of divided partisans, which was treated to an exhibition of basketball that was considered the best ever presented in Columbus Temple.

WITH all due credit to the J. J. Mieles, who displayed championship form and deserved the spoils of victory, the Goldensons were not disgraced by their defeat.

The South Siders played brilliant basketball from the start to finish and with a better share of the breaks would have handed the Mieles their first reverse of the season.

Unlike previous battles between the two clubs, the teams last night played a clean game which was thoroughly enjoyed by the large turnout of rival supporters.

WHILE Schrello and Phil Aiello, the best pair of forwards enrolled in the P. & O. League ranks this season bore the brunt of the Mieles' attack, it was really the injection of John Zuke, former Morry Cadet center, who turned the tide of battle.

The Goldensons were holding a slight advantage when the Braddock star was sent in to replace J. Aiello. Immediately the Mieles got their bearings and overtook the South Siders. Zuke gave a display of center play last night that stamps him as one of the best in the P. & O. League.

EDDIE CLARK, brilliant guard of the Goldensons, stands out as the big star of last night's battle. Clark, just a mediocre player several years ago, showed the fans a brilliant exhibition of basketball form against the Mieles and the crowd was unanimous in its opinion that he is the outstanding guard engaged in light first-class basketball.

Clark played a stellar role for the Goldensons, his shooting and floor work being factors in keeping the South Siders in the game. His showing last night was a revelation to the followers of the Mieles and he was given a big hand at the close of the contest.

Monkie Ketchell, despite the defeat at the hands of the Mieles, still ranks as one of the finest professional centers playing basketball herebouts. He was the main cog in the Goldenson machine and was the spark that kept the hopes of the South Siders burning throughout the battle. There may have been better centers engaged in professional basketball herebouts a few years back, but Ketchell gave an exhibition last night that places him with the best ever to appear in this section.

THE Mieles this year are deserving of being ranked with the smoothest-working floor machines ever developed in this vicinity. Starting out several years ago as a mere preliminary team, the Mieles gradually developed into a first-class aggregation that will prove a worthy opponent for the strongest professional teams playing hereabouts.

The Mieles not only developed their own material for their present team, but many of their products may be found in the lineups of several of their competitors in the P. & O. League.

Every man on the Miele quintet is a star in his particular position. Phil Aiello and Schrello, the forwards, work together in a manner that classifies them as the best set of scoring aces playing basketball hereabouts. J. Aiello, a raw center a few years ago, has developed into one of the best the league possesses, while Tracey and Ennis leave nothing to be desired in the way of first-class guards.

THE Mieles have lost one of their staunchest supporters in the death of John (Tookie) Calangelo yesterday afternoon. An infection following an extraction of a tooth led to his untimely death.

Calangelo had been a follower of basketball in this section for a number of years and he was a familiar figure at all important games. A likeable fellow who had numerous friends, his absence was felt at Columbus Temple last night.

A fitting tribute was paid his memory before the start of the Miele-Goldenson game when "taps" was sounded before the opening whistle. The Mieles, out of respect to their departed follower, wore mourning bands on their trunks.

New Players In Lineups

By CARL W. SHATTO.

SUCH hope as springs eternal in the human breast, plus a couple of blood transfusions, will be the psychological armor that the Pirate icemen will don for their battle with the Black Hawks of Chicago at Duquesne Garden tonight.

The eternal victory hope housed in Pucco bosoms has been given some rude shocks since the opening of the National Hockey League season, and it is probable that it would be little more than a spark tonight had the aforementioned transfusions not been effected. The new blood, which Coach Cleghorn hopes will relieve some of the artery hardening resulting from six defeats and a couple of ties, is to be contributed by Martin Burke and Bert McCaffrey, ice stalwarts who came to Pittsburgh in two deals this week.

Burke, for whom the Pirates gave Charley Langlois to Les Canadiens, will start at right defense, and McCaffrey, who came here from Toronto in a deal that sent Ty Arbour to Chicago, will be listed among the spares. Coach Cleghorn hopes that these boys will give the Bucs that triumph punch so sorely lacking in previous games, and the long-suffering fans hope that they won't make the wobbly Black and Gold machine miss on any more cylinders.

Were it not for the fact that the Pirates appear to be handcuffed by big-heartedness when opposed to cellar contenders, they might now be regarded as being on the verge of slipping into the victory column, for the record of the Chicagoans is anything but impressive. The Hawks have won only two games and are the Bucs' only really serious contenders for the cellar championship. Arbour, ex-Pirate, and Keats, flashy forward who flashed for Detroit until this week, are the boys on whom the Chicagoans are banking for a new wallop. In addition to Arbour and Keats, six other Hawks, including Coach Stanley, will make their first bow here in Chicago uniforms. Probable lineups:

Worters	G	Gardiner
Burke	D	Wentworth
Smith	D	Tracy
Mills	W	Arbour
McCarty or McCaffrey	W	Mackay

Pirate spares—Drury, White, Ratchford, McKinnon; Chicago, Keats, Taylor, Wamsley, Graham, Dennehy. Referee—Louis Berlinquette. Time of game—8:30.

lantic and making a neat job of it, and recently steering the machine safely to Mexico City, each flight requiring considerably more than 24 hours' continuous wakeful vigilance?

THE belittler's crack is along the same lines as that motheaten detraction of a college football coach or a baseball or fight manager or a leader in any other line of sport. When a coach or manager is successful the mob will tell you he owes his success to the team: when he isn't they place the blame on him and demand his scalp.

Some coaches and managers have succeeded because they have had an abundance of star talent, but as many others have made the grade because they possessed the winning genius themselves.

Give many another air pilot Lindy's Spirit of St. Louis and he'd wreck it the first time out, or wouldn't have the courage to try his endurance feats. Lindy's plane undoubtedly is a fine one, but it took the rare grit and expert craftsmanship of Lindy to make it what it is today.

LET the Ancient and Honorable Order of Belittlers prate on to their hearts' content about the team making the coach or manager in sports, but give them the good sense to lay off dragging into an odious comparison such a remarkable personage as our national hero, the one and only Lindy.

GEORGE SISLER, first toppled from his position as manager and idol of the St. Louis fans, now is released to the Washington club by the St. Louis Browns for a comparatively small sum. He is near the end of his playing career.

George originally was headed toward the Pirates, when he was a star at the University of Michigan, but through the efforts of Branch Rickey he was switched to the Browns, and the latter club won out in a contest for his services before the old National Baseball Commission in a famous decision which left behind a trail of embittered feelings.

ONE cannot refrain from wondering what might have been Sisler's and the Pirates' fate if he had come here instead of going to St. Louis, the home of also-star clubs over such a long stretch. Buried in the Mound City, Sisler never had a chance to play in a world series, whereas, with the Pirates, he would have had an opportunity to star in the classics of 1925 and 1927, and possibly others, with his playing strengthening the outfit in close races.

The Pirates went for years without a first baseman of top rank and it was during this period that Sisler was starring for the Browns. Both the player and the local club suffered by the decision which declared him the playing property of the St. Louis club.

GENE TUNNEY coined—whether consciously or not—a new word in his talk at the Chicago banquet in his honor the other night when he referred to Jack Dempsey as "unsporty" because of the latter's continual "beefing" after the Chicago fight.

In that talk, also, Gene split an infinitive when he declared "I want to publicly thank the officials."

Can it be that our Gene is neglecting his reading lately?

TOM ANDREWS, that noted fistic scrivener and historian as well as promoter and newspaperman of Milwaukee, tells a good story about Young Griffo, who died a few days ago, his passing resulting in the recounting of tale after tale of his clever feats in his fighting heyday.

"When Griffo boxed George Dixon at Coney Island in 1895 he was not considered in the best of shape and at the end of the twenty-fifth round Tom O'Rourke, who managed Dixon, told Little Chocolate, as Dixon was called, that Griffo was all in and that if they could have the bout prolonged another five rounds Dixon would be a certain winner.

"'How about another five rounds to decide the winner?' O'Rourke asked Griffo and the promoters.

"'Why, you bloomin' blighter,' flashed back Griffo, 'make it 25 more rounds and you're on.'

"That took the starch out of Dixon and the bout was declared a draw."

Bushers To Form Body

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Organization of a new baseball body by the larger minor leagues was foreseen today as a possible climax for the draft tangle between minors and majors.

The conclave of the big leagues here this week agreed to terminate the draft law now functioning if the minors so desire.

The five minor circuits which have operated under the modified draft arrangement with the majors are understood to be opposed to ending relations with the majors.

Under the modified draft the International League, American Association, Pacific Coast, Western and Three I leagues entered into separate contracts with the majors for the disposal of players. These leagues, it is understood, contemplate bolting their present minor affiliations and forming a new group if the small minors insist on abrogating the minor-major agreement.

Should the minors carry out their announced intentions of terminating the minor-major pact, this would automatically place them outside the jurisdiction of Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis and the big leagues, a situation which would be unwelcome to the leagues of higher classification in the minors.

The minors have until February 1 to decide upon what course they want to pursue. At that time their representatives are to make known a definite stand to Commissioner Landis and the major league moguls.

A committee of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, consisting of John H. Farrell, secretary; Herman J. Weisman and W. G. Bramham will report to a meeting of the minors to be held in some central city, possibly Chicago, to discuss a final course of action.

Stash Wrobleskie led the Pitt scoring with six goals from the field. Capt. Reed had four, Hyatt turned in three, McMahon got one and Scotty McGill sunk a lone one.

STAR DEFENSE MEN OF CHICAGO BLACKHAWKS

With six defeats and two ties and no victories under their belts, the Pirate hockey skaters face the invasion of the Chicago Blackhawks in a desperate mood at Duquesne Garden tonight and hope to break into the winning column. They will be strengthened by the addition of Martin Burke, obtained from Les Canadiens in the deal that sent Langlois to the Dominion a few days ago. However, in order to win, the locals will have to penetrate the defense stars of the visitors, two of whom are pictured above, Bounar Taylor (left) and Cyclone Wentworth.

SPORT COMMENT

in Maranville, Cooney, Toporcer and Schuble, not to mention Fielder Hohn, who also can be used at second base in an emergency.

In any event, there is likely to be some tall cutting in the St. Louis squad at an early date.

SECRETARY SAM WATTERS of the Pittsburgh club, home from the major league meetings, reports that Manager Bush was only wasting breath and time in trying to make trades with the heads of other clubs in the National League.

"Everybody was willing and eager to do a lot of talking but, as usual, when it came down to actual trading none of them could be induced to give any playing material of real value.

"The club owners did considerable for the good of the game by clarifying some of the regulations and taking steps toward reaching an understanding with the minors, but for trades of any importance there wasn't a chance. It was little wonder that Manager Bush gave up in despair and made an early start for home.

THE news from New York that Eddie Phelps, Jr., last season with Albany, has signed for his first big minor league engagement with the Rochester Internationals, recalls to veteran local fans the days when his father was catching for Pittsburgh. In those days the Pirates were playing their home games at old Exposition Park on the North Side.

Phelps came to the Bucs in 1903, and after the season of 1904 he was traded to Cincinnati for Catcher Heinie Peitz. In May of 1905 Cincinnati decided to release Phelps and he was claimed by Pittsburgh, but the old National Commission in one of its joke decisions awarded him to the Boston Americans.

Pittsburgh protested the award on the ground that a club in the National League had first right to the player's services, and Chairman Herrmann finally was forced to abandon his plan of selling the catcher to Boston and to send him to the Pirates.

Phelps continued to wear a Pirate uniform until the end of the 1908 season, when he was released.

THE trade between the Pittsburgh and Toronto hockey clubs, involving the exchange of Ty Arbour of the Pirates for Bert McCaffrey of the Dominion sextet, and which seemed practically certain to fall through yesterday on account of a hitch that had developed at the eleventh hour, has been put through after all.

The hitch was due to the action of one of the western clubs protesting against the proposed trade and claiming that it had a prior right to McCaffrey's services if Toronto decided to let him go.

Matters were finally straightened out, however, and late yesterday the deal between Pittsburgh and Toronto was closed, both Arbour and McCaffrey being ordered to report to their new clubs at once.

ARBOUR is the second player to leave the Pittsburgh club this week, as on Thursday Charles Langlois of the Pirates was traded to Les Canadiens for Martin Burke, the big defense man.

As explained at the time of the deal, the willingness of the Canadian club to let such a valuable man as Burke go in exchange for Langlois, who had not been going very well here, was due to its desire to get an all-French lineup, and there is hardly a French ring to a name like Burke.

As a result of the week's trading operations there will be two new faces in the Pittsburgh lineup during tonight's game against Chicago at Duquesne Garden, inasmuch as both Burke and McCaffrey report today and are reported in shape to go into action at once.

U. S. & S. at Leechburg (Corns).

THERE is no over-abundance of soccer games today for soccerites to become enthused over, but one game, the contest between the Camerons and the Pittsburgh Celtics, should go a long way to make up for the shortage of games.

The only time that it is possible to get a line on the work of clubs is in inter-league games in national competitions and with both clubs playing the style of soccer that pays in the national amateur, a good game should be flashed.

The Celtics, through no fault of their own, are out of the West Penn cup and also the district league championship as far as the Celtics is concerned, out of reach, so now the Lawrenceville squad can concentrate on the National Amateur competition and provide Heidelberg with something to worry over. However, the Camerons are likely to surprise the Strip aggregation. Plenty of real talent abounds on the Cameron squad and it should be on tap today.

The only other game of the day will find Swissvale making the trip up the Allegheny river to Leechburg to meet the Steels.

ago was a particularly sore point with the Navy.

Maj. Gen. Winan's statement, in which he announced the return of the contract reads:

"The position of West Point on the question of the three-year rule was clearly defined for the information of the public at this time because it was necessary to take action on the proposal of the superintendent of the Naval Academy to enter into a contract for the annual service game on November 24, 1928. The suggested contract related to business details connected with the game to be played on November 24, 1928. This game had already been agreed upon as one of the four games in 1927, 1928, 1929 and 1930, which was signed in October of 1926. As will be seen, the effect of the proposal of the Superintendent of the Naval Academy would be to abrogate the main contract unless the three-year rule was at once agreed to and adopted by the Military Academy.

"Since the best interests of the Military Academy absolutely forbid the adoption of any such rule, the contract was returned unsigned for the reasons given in my letter written in answer to the following letter received from the Superintendent of the Naval Academy:

"'Part 1. The original and two carbon copies of a contract for a proposed Army-Navy football game in 1928 are forwarded herewith. Attention is invited to paragraph 14 relating to eligibility. In June, 1927, the Superintendents of the Naval Academy adopted the three-year eligibility rule for inter-collegiate sports, in which the Naval Academy participates. The Superintendent of the Military Academy was informed of this decision on June 10, 1927. Rejection of the eligibility feature by the U. S. Military Academy will be considered as a rejection of the contract and the Naval Academy will consider itself free to schedule another game on November 4, 1928.

"Part 2. Early action on this contract is requested.

"(Signed) L. M. NULTON."

The disputed eligibility clause is then discussed by Maj. Gen. Winans, who concludes with the significant remark that "while I regret that you should feel this to be necessary (the threatened scheduling of another school by the Navy in Army's place in 1928) I wish to assure you that under the circumstances the authorities of the Military Academy will not oppose your wishes in this respect."

FIGHT

lowed with another left that almost dropped the champion who began to run for safety. Joe was as confident as though boxing with a sparring mate. He was trying for a knockout with every shot and Tod had several narrow escapes from Joe's whizzing gloves.

Tod depended on his legs and a straight left at the start of the second. Suddenly Glick shot a left to the body and Tod went down in a heap claiming a foul. It was not allowed and he got up at the count of nine.

Early in the fifth Joe shot a left and right to jaw and then dropped the champion with a right to the heart for the count of nine. Another left and right a few moments later put the groggy champion down again, this time the bell saved him at the count of nine or he would have been declared out.

There was a wild scene at the ringside while this was going on. Fist fights broke out all over the arena as the partisans of the men made charges and counter charges. It was several minutes before the Garden police could restore order.

In the thirteenth Tod found that by forcing the pace he could keep Joe from getting set and he was not so dangerous when back on his heels. It was the right method but Tod found it out a little late to do much good.

Early in the fourteenth Glick shot a left and right to the body that appeared low. Morgan went down and this time Referee Eddie Forbes refused to count. He declared that Morgan had been fouled and disqualified Glick.

SCHAWRTZ BEATS BROWN

Izzy Schwartz is the new flyweight champion—at least in New York State. He won a 15-round decision over Newsboy Brown in the semi-final of the Tod Morgan-Glick bout.

Izzy went right to work on his man at the tap of the gong, shooting left hooks to the body and right uppercuts to the chin. Brown was playing for the body strictly, swinging with both hands for the ribs and heart.

Schwartz did all the better boxing and cleaner hitting. He nailed the Newsboy on the jaw in the second with a right and almost put him through the ropes. Izzy showed a nice straight right and a well-timed right uppercut that did the Newsboy no good.

Izzy received a cut over the left eye in the eleventh. This disaster took a lot of ambition out of Schwartz while it encouraged Brown to redouble his belated efforts.

Neither had much left by the time the final round started. They tried everything they knew but neither had strength enough left to jar the other.

N. Y. SOLONS REFUSE TO RECOGNIZE STECHER

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—The New York State Athletic Commission says that Joe Stecher is not the world's heavyweight wrestling champion. They say he won't be until he agrees to meet Hans Steinke of Germany.

The local commission refused Stecher the right to call himself world's champion yesterday upon receipt of a request from the Illinois commission asking that the winner of the Stecher-Lewis match be regarded as the titleholder.

Chapman Trains Here

RED CHAPMAN of Boston, one of the leading contenders for the world's featherweight championship, arrived in Pittsburgh early this morning for his eight-round main bout with Tommy Crowley of the South Side in Motor Square Garden Monday night.

Chapman, whose folks reside in Homestead, and who spent his early youth there and in Pittsburgh, was delighted at the prospect of renewing old acquaintanceships. He was accompanied by his manager, Charley Cardio of Boston.

The visitor went immediately to a hotel and announced he would work out in the Motor Square gym both today and tomorrow. He said he was in fine shape. He handed the veteran Danny Kramer a sound lacing in Boston last week and has been training ever since with the exception of a layoff for a few days after that battle.

Crowley was scheduled to engage in his last hard workout this afternoon in the Pittsburgh Lyceum. He scaled 129¼ pounds after his session yesterday, when he did the equivalent of 12 rounds of work. He is scheduled to make 130 pounds and likely will come in comfortably at that figure, according to his manager, Bill Heckman.

Andy Tomosky of Wilmerding and Teddy Welch of McKeesport box 10-round bouts at Cincinnati tonight, the former meeting Jerry McDermott of Terre Haute and the latter Billy Ross of Cincinnati.

Jack Barry and Johnny Dunn were winners in bouts at Erie last night. The former stopped Pickles Donahugh of Youngstown in three rounds and the latter easily defeated Johnny Foster of Erie in six rounds. Johnny Ryan defeated Pancho Dencio in the 10-round main bout and Johnny Carey walloped Jimmy Mason.

MANDELL EASY WINNER

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 17.—(INS.)—Sammy Mandell today still is champion of the lightweights, despite the best efforts of Johnny O'Donnell of St. Paul, who had his "big shot" at the title here last night. Mandell won every round. He swarmed all over the St. Paul miller and had him just about out in the tenth round before the gong ended the uneven battle.

DUNDEE WHIPS O'BRIEN

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 17.—(INS.)—Vince Dundee of Baltimore, brother of Joe Dundee, the welterweight champion, administered a terrific beating to Tommy O'Brien here last night in 10 rounds. O'Brien was floored twice and was in distress most of the way.

FIGHT RESULTS

At New York—Tod Morgan, junior-lightweight champion, won on foul over Joe Glick, 14 rounds; Corp. Izzy Schwartz defeated Newsboy Brown, 15 rounds; Benny Schwartz defeated Johnny Erickson, 10 rounds; Marty Gallagher won by technical knockout over Pete Hackett, 2 rounds.

At Paducah, Ky. — Red Herring knocked out Billy McCann, 4 rounds.

At Denver — Al Webster technically knocked out Johnny Gerarden, 4 rounds.

awful fuss as they tried to stretch the race right down to the last day. They came very close to their desire.

THE reliable Kremer was among the overtaxed athletes who could not continue on that momentous occasion. The Pirates gave Frenchy five big runs in the first round, but Remy proceeded to blow most of the lead, although he had a lot of help from his mates as the balloon went up. But when Miljus and his dark scowl went to the mound there was a cessation of the enemy drive and it wasn't long before John was in complete charge of the foe.

IT'S the left-handed section of the pitching division that should be worrying Bush. Fred Fussell is the only remaining southpaw to whom Bush can look with any degree of certainty, and assurance built upon minor league performances is not always justified.

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—Johnny Mostil, who is conditioning himself at his Whiting (Ind.) home by shoveling coal and bowling, is confident of a comeback in 1928, according to Manager Schalk of the White Sox. BOBBED-HAIRED GIRLS SHOT DOWN IN CANTON

MOTHER TO JOIN HIM SOON

By International News Service.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 17.—With his mother coming down to visit him over Christmas, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today looked forward to a doubly joyful stay at the Mexican capital.

The flying colonel learned of his mother's decision in a long-distance telephone conversation with her yesterday. Mrs. Lindbergh had previously declined to visit her son.

After the holidays are over America's flying ambassador of good-will will continue on his tour of the Central American countries, the inhabitants of which are already planning to do him great honors when he arrives.

For a time it appeared that Lindbergh would be drawn into a controversy concerning bull-fights, but today all doubt in the question was dispelled by the young man himself. He has been invited to attend a bull-nght tomorrow. Telegrams from organizations in the United States have urged him not to attend.

But Lindbergh, feeling that he is the sole judge in such matters, has let it be known that he will attend. According to the flier himself, this happens to be a case of doing in Rome as the Romans do. Besides, as he said:

"I believe that Mexicans are perfectly capable of selecting their own sports."

PLYS MEXICAN PLANE

Aside from the Spirit of St. Louis, which is his trusty and sentimental partner, all airplanes look alike to Col. Lindbergh. He demonstrated this by the ease with which he skyrocketed over Mexico City in a Mexican army plane.

"He is perfect," declared a Mexican aviation major who had watched Lindbergh fly over the city. "Nobody can touch him."

The flight has further endeared Lindbergh to the residents of this city, for he gave them such a thrill as they had never witnessed before with his dips, loops and whirls high in the air.

This was not the first time "Lindy" had showed his expertness with strange planes. While in Europe he used both British and French army planes without previous tests.

ANTI-REDS MASSACRE FLAPPERS

CANTON, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—At least 14 bobbed-haired girls and women have been shot down by anti-red troops. Bobbed hair is considered to be the sign of a female Communist in China.

A ruthless campaign against the Communists is continuing. The troops shot down the girls and women in the streets without compunction.

It was stated here that it has been definitely established that the Communist plot at Canton was organized by the Soviet consul-general, Poliyalisky. He was announced to be under arrest.

(There were rumors in Hongkong that the Soviet consul-general was executed in the roundup of Russians after the counter-revolutionary movement).

DEPORT SOVIET CHIEFS

HANKOW, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Fifteen Soviet officials, including Consul-General Plitsche, were deported this morning. They left aboard a Chinese steamer en route to Shanghai and Vladivostok, Siberia.

Most of the Russian and Chinese officials arrested in yesterday's raid on the consulate and Communists apprehended in other parts of the city were released. Sixty persons were detained for further investigation.

Large 10th Ward Vote District Split Into 3

Two election precincts were added to the Tenth Ward yesterday when Judge James R. Macfarlane in Quarter Sessions Court handed down an order dividing the Fourteenth election district of the Tenth Ward into three districts after a hearing on petition of residents, urging the division because of the large number of qualified and registered voters, the wide area of the district, and the inconvenience and delay at elections.

The new district boundaries, polling places and election officers appointed are:

Fourteenth District: Bounded by Hampton street, Stanton avenue, Bryant street and Heths avenue; polling place, St. Raphael's School, Chislett street; John P. Hickey, judge; Bernard Haas, majority inspector; Lulu H. Riley, minority inspector.

Twenty-seventh District: Bounded by Bryant street, Stanton avenue, Dragoon way, Vilsack street and Heths avenue; polling place, basement Morningside Presbyterian Church, Chislett street; Katherine V. Dunn, judge; George A. Ley, majority inspector; John C. McGraw, minority inspector.

Twenty-eighth District: Bounded by Vilsack street, Dragoon way, El Paso street and Martha street; polling place, garage of William Staff, rear of 166 Chislett street; John J. Duffy, judge; Annie G. Fulton, majority inspector; Ben Finklestein, minority inspector.

Division of the Twenty-ninth District of the Fourteenth Ward into three or more districts was asked in a petition presented by Attorney M. Barney Cohen, representing residents of the district. The district contains 1,500 qualified voters and 832 registered voters, 667 voting in November and 784 in September, and covers a wide area, causing delay and inconvenience and keeping voters in line for hours, according to the petition.

W. & J. TRUSTEES FILE ANSWER TO SUIT

WASHINGTON, Pa., Dec. 17.—The athletic department of a college was set up as distinctly separate from the halls of learning themselves by Washington and Jefferson trustees, who filed answer today to the $25,000 damage suit instituted by Arthur L. Lyle for injuries suffered in the collapse of wooden bleachers at the W. & J.-Carnegie Tech football game in 1925. The athletic department, the trustees contend, was responsible for the wooden bleachers, it accepted moneys for that particular game and it used the moneys in its own activities.

Lyle's action is the only court development arising from that game. All other claims of the 100 injured spectators were settled out of court.

BOY FALLS DOWN COAL CHUTE; SUE FOR $15,000

Howard Beech, in behalf of his 3-year-old son, Roy, has entered suit in Common Pleas Court against Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Kienzler, 200 Birmingham avenue, Carrick, asking $15,000 damages, for injuries received by the lad when he fell down an open coal chute into the cellar of the defendant's property. Albert Preusser, 4508 Minerva street, is suing the Duquesne Light Company for $35,000 damages on account of injuries suffered by his 10-year-old son Paul. He charges that last July 6, while the boy was playing on land adjoining the playground on Lorigan street, a part of a telephone pole was thrown on the ground by a light company employe in such a manner that it rolled down a hill and struck the Preusser boy.

One More Week For Toy Gifts Left

One week more till Christmas eve! In their minds little folks are picturing the coming of Santa Claus and his reindeer team, and in every sound they listen for the music of his sleigh-bells. One week more and the Toy Mission will accomplish the greatest work in its history for the poor children of Pittsburgh.

"That every child in Pittsburgh shall be made happier by having toys on Christmas is our sole aim," said Manager George L. Bond as he moved about among the mountains of packed toys at the Mission today and surveyed the thousands of gift bundles that await sending out to deserving children next Saturday.

"We have made wonderful progress in getting ready for the big distribution day," he continued, "but still more toys are needed, and the cash donations for the buying of new toys are saving the situation for us.

"New requests are coming in hourly, indicating that more and more families are feeling the pinch of adversity and require our help in order that playthings may be provided for their children. We believe that a toy, a good book and a bright-faced doll are almost as important in the proper development of the child as the necessities. Toys make children optimistic, develop their imagination, give them confidence, teach them appreciation of the beautiful and brighten their whole life."

Ann and Georgie, Facing The Facts, Once More Agree—The End

HE MIGHT have said anything. He might have pursued a mistaken gallantry with one more lie. He might have admitted the cold facts with a careless disregard. Instead, he was simply himself. He was simply Bill, and he said in an almost boyish helplessness:

"Well, what am I going to do now?"

It was the most serious talk Ann had ever had in her life, and yet she laughed.

"Bill, you are rather wonderful. But somehow I don't mind giving you up, though I'll always be terribly fond of you. Georgie loves you; you love her. I don't need to tell you what to do."

She went from the room before he could reply. She found Georgie upstairs, a new Georgie, a white and frightened girl.

"Oh, I can't, I can't," Georgie pleaded. "Don't make me go downstairs, Ann! Please don't!"

But in the end she did go down, in the end she did, with a little breath, gather her courage together, and take the first step.

Ann sat by the window, looking out, thinking. What was she thinking about? She didn't know. Once her memory returned to the box that Georgie had brought home. It wasn't there now. It had been sent back.

She did not allow herself to think of Georgie alone with Bill, in the rapture of their mutual revelation. Georgie had been afraid, afraid she would not know what to say, what to do. Oh, there was no need to know, no need to worry. Georgie and Bill loved each other—what they said was so unimportant compared to that!

Minutes went slowly by. It grew later. There was a step on the stair. Georgie came into the room, softly. She held her hands out, took Ann's, did not speak. Her eyes were glowing softly.

Then she went to the window, and Ann instinctively crossed the room. She saw Georgie wave, saw her touch her finger to her lips. Georgie turned and came back to her.

Ann smiled faintly. "I'm glad," she said softly. "I'm glad."

Still Georgie did not speak. She did not trust herself to speak of the happiness that moved in her now. But she did not need to. Every step she took, every glance she flashed spoke of that, and of that only.

When Georgie did break the silence, it was not to mention Bill, not to refer to what had so plainly happened. Instead it was of Ann herself she spoke.

"Do you like working at the factory, Ann?"

"Of course I don't, Georgie."

"What about that man you introduced to me one day there—is he still around?"

"What man?"

"Oh, you know."

Ann flushed a little. "I suppose you mean Jimmy McCormick."

"Yes, that's his name."

"He's still there, I guess."

Suddenly Georgie smiled, a wise, tender little smile.

"An."

"Yes?"

"Why don't you marry him?"

"Georgie, please don't."

"I'm serious."

"Well, he hasn't asked me, for one thing."

"If he hasn't, it's because you didn't want him to."

"What do you mean?"

"Why, he was crazy about you. I could see that by the way he looked at you."

Ann smiled: "You funny kid! Are you trying to boss me now?"

"Of course I am. I never knew anyone so helpless."

"Well, why do you want me to marry Jimmy McCormick?"

"Because he's crazy about you, and because he's just the kind of man you ought to marry, anyway."

Ann was thoughtful, looking at her folded hands. She was thinking that their comradeship was back again, that she and Georgie understood each other and could be frank and truthful. She tried to be frank and truthful now.

"Listen, Georgie, he hates me now. On account of Bill. You see, I—well, Bill never really liked me . . . that way. I used Jimmy to make him jealous. You know. I don't have to explain. Only Jimmy realizes what I did. And he hates me."

"Probably he loves you more than ever," Georgie said with a knowing air.

Ann went over to her impulsively. "You silly kid—trying to get me married off somehow!"

"No, I'm not. I'm just trying to point to you that—"

"What?"

Georgie made a sudden gesture. "Oh, well, perhaps I am trying to get you married off. So, Ann, look out!"

CHAPTER XXXV.

IN THE morning Ann remembered what it was Georgie had said. Curiously enough, it dominated even the outstanding thought that Georgie and Bill were together at last.

Jimmy McCormick in love with her? Well, perhaps he had been. But that scene in the office that day, his grim mouth and accusing eyes, there was no forgetting that! Jimmy was through with her. Whatever illusions he'd had about her were gone for good.

She liked Jimmy, but until now, until this very moment, she had never thought seriously of marrying him. Of course, he was kind and strong and faithful — you could see that. It would be wonderful if she really loved him and he loved her.

But he had fallen out of love with her, and she had never loved him.

She put the thought out of her mind and obstinately returned to her work. After all, she was just Georgie's old-maid sister, and why should she expect to be anything different?

But when she got home that night, Georgie seemed excited, as if she had some secret she could not reveal.

"Listen, Ann, want to come out tonight to the dance they're having at Union Hall?"

"With whom?"

"Oh, just the two of us. I feel like being a wall-flower for a change."

"What about Bill?"

Georgie answered smoothly, with an air that said plainly there would never be any resentment or misunderstanding about Bill between them as long as they:

"Bill's working overtime. I made him. I won't marry him until he gets another raise. That is, he thinks I won't!"

"Well, all right, if you want to go to Union Hall," Ann answered listlessly.

She did not wonder about who was giving the dance or where Georgie had secured tickets. She wasn't curious any more—perhaps about anything.

They found a booth and sat down together, watching the first dancers. Then all at once Ann started, and she looked away. Jimmy McCormick was here! He was with Ellen Davis. He was even dancing! Jimmy McCormick!

"Oh, look who's here!" Georgie exclaimed.

"You knew he was going to be here!" Ann accused her.

"Of course I didn't!" Georgie declared, but that lie did not trouble her, even for a breath.

So Ann watched. Once she danced with a man whom Georgie knew. Georgie knew someone everywhere. But her eyes, in spite of her firm intention to be indifferent, strayed back again to Jimmy McCormick.

Apparently he did not even know she was here. Certainly he never glanced in her direction. He was looking down at Ellen Davis, smiling and interested. Ellen Davis had won him at last!

Then for the first time Ann thought seriously about Jimmy. Had he really loved her? He'd been awkward and silent enough and yet—and yet she knew, in her heart, that she had flung away a love that was real and strong and lasting!

An hour went by. Ann was unhappy. Twice she asked Georgie to go.

"Oh, I wouldn't think of it! I'm having the best time!"

"No wonder, the way you're dancing. I thought you said you wanted to be a wall-flower?"

"Oh, I'm likely to say anything!"

And Georgie was off again. When that dance was over, she returned to Ann.

"Let's get something to eat," she said. "I'm starving."

She touched Ann's arm. Georgie seemed curiously dominant, and Ann did not resist.

They walked slowly down the long room. Presently they came to a booth where Georgie stopped.

"Hello," she said, holding out her hand with a friendly smile. "Oh, Ann, here's a friend of yours."

It was Jimmy, and he was alone. "Stay right here!" Georgie insisted, "and I'll order some things. It's the only way to get any service at all."

Ann, confused and uncertain, glanced down at Jimmy. She was angry at Georgie. She couldn't stay here—Ellen might come back at any moment—and besides the glowering look Jimmy was giving her—

"Sit down!" he suddenly commanded in his deep voice.

Ann obeyed.

"I—I haven't seen you for quite a long while," she faltered.

"No. I took care that you shouldn't," he answered.

She winced a little. She said with a cutting sharpness she scarcely suspected in herself:

"You know it's awfully amusing remembering what you told me the last time. You've consoled yourself pretty quickly, haven't you?"

"As if you cared!"

"Of course, I don't care."

"Then we're both glad."

She should have risen, she should have gotten away. Where was Georgie? She looked around. Georgie was dancing. Georgie had brought her here deliberately! She felt as though she were going to cry.

"Oh, Ann, I didn't mean to say—whatever it was I did say," cried Jimmy suddenly contrite.

She looked away, then she became aware that he had taken her hand.

"Ann, see here, don't you know I love you!"

"But Ellen—I saw you here with Ellen!"

"We don't mean anything to each other—Ellen and I. That was your sister's idea."

"My sister?"

"Yes. I can't keep anything back. I can't go through with a thing like this. I'll tell you the truth. Your sister called me up. We had a talk. I agreed to do what she said. Ellen came along with me."

"But Ellen's crazy about you."

"Ellen's crazy about a new man every week. She agreed to come here and pretend—well, maybe, it was because Georgie made her."

Ann was breathing hard. Georgie had done this, Georgie had done everything! Her heart was fluttering.

"But you were willing to wound me—to play a trick like that?" she asked.

He grinned slowly. "Didn't you play one on me?"

"I know, but that was different."

Then suddenly his smile deepened. There was no mistaking the tenderness in it.

And suddenly Ann knew that at last, without quite realizing how, she was happy. Bill and Georgie—they were together. Herself and Jimmy—and the mists cleared away from her eyes. That brief and violent infatuation for Bill had run its course. The thing she felt now was quieter perhaps, but deeper, too.

Her hand rested in Jimmy's hand. She looked down. She did not speak. She was thinking only that life was worth while after all.

THE END.

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By ADELE GARRISON

AT Philip Veritzen's unexpected questions concerning his "young cub" I had all I could do to keep from betraying the astonishment—and—alarm—I felt at his knowledge, thus disclosed, of things we had thought were foreign to his acquaintance or his desire for information.

Neither Lillian nor I had any idea that he knew of his son's sojourn in the east end of Long Island, and during my description of the Lincoln family, which I had given while we were driving up to the inn, I had dropped no hint of the identity of the young man I had mentioned as having attracted Eleanor Lincoln's admiration. Indeed, I had only spoken of him for Lillian's benefit, because I was anxious to paint as complete a picture of the family for her as I could.

Before I could formulate an answer Lillian came to the rescue with what the great producer must have deemed a slashing blow from the "mean ax" she boasted of possessing.

"So you're keeping cases on Noel now, are you, Phil? Well, it's about time you began to realize that you're the parent of one of the finest lads who ever ate his heart out for a father too stubborn to appreciate him."

Remembering the glimpse I once had had of Philip Veritzen's anguish over the estrangement from his son, which he was too obstinate to end, Lillian's speech seemed brutal to me. Yet I knew that even with her strong sympathy for Noel she would not have uttered the words if it had not been for the father's slighting reference to the boy.

There was no change in Mr. Veritzen's face or eyes as she spoke. But his body stiffened ever so slightly and his head lifted exactly as if he just had received a slight electric shock. He was still looking in my direction, as if waiting for an answer to the query he had put to me, and with a nonchalances which Lillian's interruption had given me time to assume, I said:

"You're what a neighbor of mine would call a 'master hand at guessing,' Mr. Veritzen. Yes, Noel is the young man upon whom Miss Lincoln's fancy appeared to be fixed on the day we called upon her. Noel happened to be at the house and we took him with us."

A grim little smile curved my employer's lips.

"It would be hard to fix an occasion when he didn't 'happen' to be there, wouldn't it?" he asked. "At least as long as you have Miss Mary Harrison for a guest."

Again I felt a little clutch of fear at my heart. What else did the man know? Of course, he must have had some trusted agent watching the movements of his son, but except for Noel's frequent calls at the farmhouse, there was nothing to connect him with Mary. She never had gone with him, even to drive, unless Katherine or I were with her.

"I imagine she is the attraction at the farmhouse," I returned, with a little laugh, although my lips were stiff with the fear that he held other and more terrifying knowledge of Mary behind his smiling mask.

He looked at me steadily and I saw something inscrutable—I wondered if it were mockery—in his brilliant black eyes.

"I cannot commend his discrimination," he said, and beneath the fold of my coat my fingers involuntarily contracted into a fist with which I could have struck him for the inane repetition of the personal note when my nerves were so taut with fear that he already knew of Mary's escapade as the masked dancer, and thus would make absolutely futile her intended confession to him. There was a note of contempt in my anger also. It was so banal a thing for so brilliant a man to utter. It was the sort of thing, couched in different language, perhaps, which Otto, the chauffeur, sitting stolidly behind the wheel of the great car, might say to the parlormaid of the Veritzen household. And I felt that the parlormaid's answering smile could be no sillier than the mechanical grimace with which I answered Mr. Veritzen's sally as I waited uneasily for his next words.

Horoscopes

Sunday, December 18.

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds auguries of favorable and happy home and social activities and furthers spiritual and mystical interests and affiliations. The ideal and aspirational hold sway.

Those whose birthday it is may gain employment through superiors during the year, and find personal and mystical affiliations flourishing.

A child born on this day may be artistic, poetic, musical or mystically inclined and should gain headway through employment or through the favor of those in power.

Monday, December 19.

Monday's astrological forecast shows conflicting conditions, with a degree of liveliness and new undertakings, but the financial outlook may be construed as hazardous. Also it may be dangerous to affix the signature to any writing with laxity.

Those whose birthday it is may have a lively year, with new projects, but finances are not assured nor would it be wise to sign papers without caution.

A child born on this day should be lively and enterprising.

Notable Natitsty: Minnie Maddern Fiske, dramatic actress.

Neighbors Said — — Because She Complained So Much.

ONE DAY it was headaches, next day stomach troubled. And she used to be so good-looking. What a miserable life! The fact was she had many symptoms of System-Poisoning—professionally called "TOXEMIA"—and didn't know it!

There are thousands like her. When people feel constipated and nerves on edge, they take ordinary laxative pills and waters that fail to eliminate the poison wastes which develop dangerous bacteria in the intestines. That's why so many suffer. But just let such people take PARTOLA, the pleasant internal antiseptic and laxative, then watch those symptoms disappear! All good druggists sell regular size box 50¢, double size 50¢.

Brokers Turn Down Orders; Schwab Honor; Trade Rises.

By B. C. FORBES

SOME big New York Stock Exchange houses, especially those having private wires to other parts of the country, are actually turning away business. Why?

Because they have reached the limit of their borrowing capacity—at least the limit they consider it safe or prudent to go.

This is not astonishing when you remember that the daily value of transactions sometimes exceeds $300,000,000 par value and quite often $200,000,000 without there having been the slightest increase in the stock exchange's total membership of 1,100 since 1879, when the addition made totaled only 40 seats. The tremendous expansion in the business enjoyed by members is reflected by the advance in the value of seats on the exchange from less than $100,000 a few years ago to over $200,000 today.

Probably it will be found necessary by and by to admit more members in order to take proper care of the public's patronage of the stock market.

GEORGE F. BAKER, New York's 87-year-old banking leader, although not able to move around very actively at present, is mentally as keen as ever. A friend who talked with him a day or two ago at his home found him intensely interested in all that's going on businesswise.

I understand that the reports received by Mr. Baker's First National Bank during the last few weeks have been distinctly more encouraging than they were for a time before then. This conservative old institution, with the pick of important clients, takes quite an optimistic view of our spring business prospects. I understand that its feeling is that some of the highly speculative stocks may experience more or less readjustment downwards, but that nothing in the way of a serious collapse is regarded as threatened. A good deal of the market's advance, it is reasoned, has represented the discounting of impending betterment in general business early next year.

Coming from such a source, that's very encouraging.

OUR universities gradually are recognizing the national worth of our ablest, most constructive business leaders. The University of Pennsylvania is today going to confer on Charles M. Schwab the honorary degree of doctor of science. The science which most interests Mr. Schwab in these later years of his life is the science of what he calls "human engineering," meaning the betterment of human relationship in industry and business in general, especially between employers and their workers.

I am told that Judge Gary confided to a friend within a year of his death that if he could have lived his life over again he would have modified his attitude towards workers.

After all, aren't human beings more important than machinery or production or gigantic profits? Happily, some of our veteran leaders are now earnestly trying to impress this upon the younger generation of executives. And progress is being made.

THE so-called Standard Oil group is rapidly becoming less of a "group" and more of a series of absolutely independent companies. You can expect to see by and by keener and more widespread competition between different Standard companies. Each management is out to do the best possible for its own stockholders without any tremendous solicitude for the stockholders of any concern whatsoever, Standard or non-Standard.

WHEN a towering leader passes on, it usually leads to promotion and recognition for brilliant comers. One by one the influential directorships held by Judge Gary are being filled by younger men on the upgrade. Such an incident as the removal of Dwight W. Morrow from the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. and his acceptance of the ambassadorship to Mexico—a position, by the way, he is filling most tactfully—also opens the way for advancements, Mr. Morrow having been a director on a number of important boards. Age also causes many leaders to transfer burdens to younger shoulders.

One illustration this week was the election of John Stewart Baker, the 34-year-old son of Stephen Baker, as his father's successor in the presidency of the 129-year-old Bank of Manhattan. The elder Baker, whose family has been identified with the institution from the day of its organization, becomes chairman.

Young Baker has the distinction of being the youngest bank president in New York, younger even than James G. Blaine of the Fidelity Trust Company, John H. Brennan of the Times Square Trust Company, Charles S. McCain of the National Park Bank, C. Stanley Mitchell of the Central Mercantile Bank or Percy H. Johnston of the Chemical National Bank.

Verily, youth will be served!

General List Quiet, Prices Steady

A heavy turnover in Carnegie Metals with the price rising steadily was the feature of Pittsburgh Stock Exchange during the short session today. The movement was a carry-through on the advance which began a week or so ago when the stock was about 5 points under this morning's early price.

The Carnegie Metals Company has extensive holdings in Mexico and it was suggested today that the present bally-hoo in certain circles purporting to reflect the "friendly" relations of the Mexican and United States governments might have something to do with the advances in Carnegie Metals as well as some of the mining issues in other markets. Otherwise there was no news to account for the rise.

Miscellaneous issues were dull and there were no important price changes. American Window Glass preferred sold again at 85, the lowest in 20 years.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Seminole Goes Lower.

The Seminole area for 24 hours ended 7 a. m. Friday, produced 275,116 barrels of crude oil from 1,046 wells, compared with 284,427 barrels on Thursday.

Week's Commercial Failures.

Commercial failures in the United States last week totaled 305, against 299 in the week previous, 418 two weeks ago, and 413 in the same week last year, according to R. G. Dun & Co.

American Rayon Products.

Officials of American Rayon Products Corporation report current operations are running at a favorable rate, and that the annual report may show a small profit, as against a deficit of $127,328 last year. Recent improvement in the company's business is said to be due to the readjustments and economies effected by the new management and the generally healthier conditions in the Rayon industry the last six months.

Sinclair Oil's Strength.

Sinclair was turned over in big blocks for the second consecutive day and added fractionally to its advance. There are several rumors in circulation as to the reason for the activity, but those in the corporation declare there is no idea of any change in the personnel of the management. Other oils were a little higher, but the buying in the petroleum group fails to attract any following of consequence because of the uncertainty of the outlook for the industry. Oil men who attended the Chicago meeting, however, tell of a change in sentiment among most of the leaders of the industry and declare they are in closer harmony at this time than ever before in history. If the oil men can get together and hold down output, the oils would be seized upon as the ideal vehicle to carry the market along during any corrective period.

Penna. Crude Raised Again.

The South Penn Oil Company has advanced Pennsylvania crude oil in New York Transit lines 5 cents a barrel to $2.60; Bradford district all 5 cents to $2.55; Pennsylvania oil in National Transit lines 5 cents to $2.65, in Southwest Penn lines 5 cents to $2.65 and Eureka lines 5 cents to $2.65. Pennsylvania oil in Buckeye Pipe lines is advanced 10 to $2.35. Keister grade is unchanged at $1.10.

Newmont Mining Prospects.

Directors of Newmont Mining Company meet next Tuesday to act on dividends. Shareholders are expected to receive a Christmas gift in the shape of a 5 per cent stock dividend, which, on the present selling price would have a value of nearly $6.50 a share. This together with the regular $4 annual cash would mean dividends equal to nearly $10.50 a share in 1927.

Probing Mail Order Merger.

The Federal Trade Commission is investigating rumors of a $225,000,000 merger between Sears Roebuck & Co. and Montgomery Ward Company. Although nothing official has been received by the commission to corroborate reports of such a consolidation, an inquiry is being made. Reports received at Washington indicate the formation of a new company which under rumored plans of two large mail order concerns will take over the companies by an interchange of stock.

Sparks Withington Net Up.

Sparks Withington Company reports for November, net profits were $208,352 before taxes, compared with $173,436 for October. For first five months of the fiscal year, which started July 1, net profits were $661,705.

World Copper Output Lower.

Production of copper by countries which furnish about 98 per cent of the world's total amounted to 141,975 short tons in November, against 145,371 in October, and 146,321 in November, 1926, according to the American Bureau of Metal statistics. Eleven months production totaled 1,589,-393 tons, compared with 1,458,191 in the corresponding period a year ago.

Sheet and Tube Makes Denial.

The Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company denies it is seeking to acquire the Associated Supply Company at this time.

Youngstown Steel Men Optimistic.

Independent steel makers in the Youngstown district have larger volume of unfilled tonnage than at any time in the last four months. Profits for the fourth quarter are expected to approximate third quarter figures, with steelmakers anticipating better showing in the first quarter of 1928.

Tulsa May Get Oil Exchange.

The Chamber of Commerce of Tulsa has appointed a committee to determine the feasibility of establishing an oil exchange there. The exchange would deal in crude oil and its products along the same lines as other exchanges dealing in commodities having a world market.

Independent Oil Earnings.

Independent Oil and Gas Company reports for 10 months ended October 31, net income of $2,124,242 after depreciation and depletion, equal to $3.28 a share on 650,000 shares outstanding.

Holmes Get West Elizabeth Bonds.

The Borough Council of the town of West Elizabeth, Allegheny county, awarded $35,000 tax free street improvement bonds to J. H. Holmes & Co. last night. The bonds are offered on a 3.30 basis.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—Influenced by a larger official estimate of wheat production in Argentina than was looked for, wheat prices averaged lower today in the early dealings. The Argentine crop indicated was in excess both of the yield in 1926 and in 1925. Starting unchanged to 1c higher the Chicago wheat market underwent a moderate general setback, but later rallied. Corn developed strength, showing fractional advances all around after an irregular start. Oats were firm. Provisions held steady.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY . . . . . Renewed Hope

WITH LEGAL ADVICE HE GOT DURING A LUNCHEON, HARTFORD OAKDALE HURRIED TO THE BUNGLE HOME, WHERE HE ADDED SOME TOUCHES OF HIS OWN TO TWO STRANGE, AND POSSIBLY, POTENT WORDS.
HOWEVER, AFTER GETTING THE OPINION OF MY OWN FIVE ATTORNEYS I WANTED TO BE SURE I WAS RIGHT, SO ALL SIX OF US HELD A CONFERENCE WITH SEVEN OTHER OF THE BEST LAWYERS IN TOWN. WE WORKED ALL NIGHT IN MY APARTMENTS AND FINALLY AGREED UPON WHAT I, BY THE WAY, HAD SUGGESTED, THAT IS, TO DEMAND A WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS.
HABEAS CORPUS!
HABEAS WHAT?
CORPUS HABEAS CORPUS! IT'S A WRIT. WE OFTEN USE THE EXPRESSION IN JUST SUCH CASES AS THE COLONEL'S.
HABEAS CORPUS! IT'S VERY SIMPLE!
HABEAS CORPUS.
WHAT DOES IT MEAN?
FRANKLY, MRS. BUNGLE, THERE'S NO TIME TO EXPLAIN THAT RIGHT NOW. WE MUST ACT IMMEDIATELY. I'D HAVE MY OWN ATTORNEYS HANDLE THE MATTER BUT THEY HESITATED TO INJECT THEMSELVES INTO A CASE WHERE YOU ALREADY HAD AN ATTORNEY RETAINED, HOWEVER WE HAVE THESE ELEVEN ATTORNEYS IN BACK OF US. AH, WHAT IS YOUR ATTORNEY'S PHONE NUMBER?
LET ME THINK? I HAVE HIS CARD. LET ME THINK?

I BELIEVE YOU, AND I'LL SEE THAT YOU GET OUT ALL RIGHT—AND AS FOR THIS BIRD, WE'LL FIND A NICE, STRONG CAGE FOR HIM!
WITH MY COMPLIMENTS, CUT YOURSELF A PIECE OF THROAT!

FRISBY IS TOUCHED BY SIMPLE APPEAL

This exclusive picture of Mr. Frisby will not be published in any other newspaper.

Dear Mr. Frisby:

We girls have formed a Frisby Club. We feel that no one in the last forty years has inspired us like you have.

My object in writing is to ask you for a little Frisby token for our club, a scrap of your writing, a discarded pencil that you have used, an old sock. Anything personal will do, you busy mans. Will you send our club a dear Frisby memento? No? All right.

Your friend,
NARCISSUS UNT.

Sir:

A mellow moon, a lofty cliff. A beautiful girl brought my mad infatuation to a climax. Hoarse with love, I rasped: "If you won't marry me, step aside and I'll cast myself over you cliff!" Imagine my embarrassment when she stepped aside.

Up and breakfast on pickled oysters and thence to Mr. Pesterres' to see whether my breeches be sewn or no, and so to towne, and while passing Milord Sperle's coachworkes, I did (for which Heaven forgive me) go in and sit in a new coach, bouncing up and down upon the seat, and I ask the price an hundred times, but when the gudgeon (Mister Dewey) grasp my arm and seek to lead me to sign of my name for the purchase of a coach, I did turn heel and run to the printery, panting mightily.

BUGS BAER Says

Doc Kaveney, of Brooklyn Navy Yard, wants to know about the ethics of selling races.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER.

We're glad Doc brought that up. Doc desires to know who has the privilege of buying after the selling race.

So far as we figure it out the bookie buys the jockey. Then the jockey buys the horse.

All the owner buys is the oats.

Selling races were invented many years ago by a man who couldn't get rid of his horses in any other way.

It is very economical but horses dread it. The nag doesn't get any hay for a week before the selling race. Why should a man feed a hoss that he is going to lose?

The Doc also wants us to referee a boxing match at the Navy yard. That's one honor we must refuse.

An American flag flying on the top of a mast ain't any protection to a guy on the ground.

WORLD PROBLEMS

To many ENGLISHMEN, women
Are STILL divided (in their MINDS) into TWO classes:
WIVES and WANTONS.
These men are HARD
To get ON with. No matter
Whether a WOMAN happens
To be his one WIFE or
His WANTON ONE!
Many FRENCHMEN divide women
Into two categories, TOO,
They EITHER consider them as
MENTAL equals (which is RARE) or as alluring MATES (which is common).
But the AMERICAN man seems
More OPEN-MINDED. In fact
Some are so BROADMINDED
That a GIRL can walk right
INTO the big open SPACES
Of their HEARTS and set up
ANY sort of an IDEAL there
She PLEASES.
And in his SPARE
Time he will WORSHIP
It. In America ALL women
Are "GIRLS" and the great MAJORITY of men GALLANT.
ALL countries have their PROBLEMS—
The GREATEST of which Are WOMEN and POLITICS.

Before the Prince Was Born

This Is Queen Mary, Very Pleasing.

QUEEN MARY OF ENGLAND, BEFORE SHE MARRIED KING GEORGE.

The young flapper lady in her "chemise" gown, tied together at the top, barely reaching her knees at the bottom, will smile at this old photograph. And the young gentleman "sheik," with his baggy trousers and brilliant sweater, may say, "Take it away; it hurts my eyes; it slays me."

Nevertheless, for sensible men and women this is a pleasing picture.

It explains the popularity of Queen Mary of England, which is a great asset for British royalty. It explains also the fact that her three boys and her daughter are well-behaved young people, doing what they are expected to do—EVERYTHING POSSIBLE TO MAKE ROYALTY LAST, in the face of aggressive democracy.

The tight waist on this costume would arouse the mirth of young ladies who tell you that they "park their corsets" before they dance, and of whom a majority have parked them once and for all.

Leaving off corsets is a good idea, if you exercise enough to develop abdominal and other muscles.

But making it too EVIDENT that you haven't any corset ISN'T such a good idea.

There is a lady-like trimness about this dress, about the hair, the hat, the absence of short sleeves and low neck, that will please many.

Would we go back to these fashions of the last century? We would NOT.

But we wish that the more sensible dressing of today would be a LITTLE more modest, as well as more sensible.

We wish that charming females would reserve some information for the men they intend to marry, that they would not allow every part of their anatomy to stick out through a piece of thin silk.

We wish especially that they would stop wearing, instead of hats, little tight caps that look like part of a horse's bridle, making all their heads look exactly alike and utterly destroying romance.

Oil Industry Asks Help; How to Give and Guard It

The government ought to grant the help for which the desperate oil industry asks.

Meeting in Chicago, the directors of the American Petroleum Institute appealed for legislation relieving them from prosecution under Federal and State anti-trust laws if they make agreements to restrict output in times of over-production like the present.

Immunity under such circumstances should be granted and laws passed by Congress and by the legislatures of the oil-producing states.

The purpose and result of restraining production is to raise prices. They ought to be raised to a level where they pay the cost of producing oil. They are below this level now.

So the smaller companies are on the verge of bankruptcy. If they are ruined and the industry is left in the control of a few powerful survivors THEN the public will pay dearly for its present joy ride on cheap gasoline.

The public is willing to pay fair prices to preserve competition, to conserve our future supply, and to encourage the search for new supplies.

Of course, if we let producers restrict output and raise prices, we must have a public body in control of prices to guard against extortion.

That means a Federal Oil Commission, like the Interstate Commerce Commission, to supervise the industry.

This newspaper predicts that when the oil industry has once experienced the advantages of stability under co-operative production and government regulation, it will wonder why it waited so long to ask for help.

Once the railroads were cutting each other's throats in the same civil war that characterizes the oil industry at present.

Today, the railroads are basking in the sunshine of prosperity whose surest bulwark is, they admit, the regulation and the protection of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Thrifty U. S.

The United States Treasury announced on December 8 an issue of 3¼ per cent one-year certificates.

An eager public snapped up the whole amount in one day—and so great was the demand that Uncle Sam could have sold $1,200,000,000, five times the $250,000,000 offered.

Which indicates plainly enough that Americans have money—not to burn, but to put into sound savings. The incident is another indication of what President Coolidge said in his message to Congress, that prosperity is our fireside companion.

OH, WHAT A DIFFERENCE!

Garrett P Serviss Says:

Heat and the Human Engine

"Will you kindly write an explanation of latent heat?" asks a Grand Rapids doctor, who goes on to say: "In studying the heat of the body I find that it is constant at 98 degrees, yet if evaporation from the body stops the temperature immediately rises. Again, the outside temperature at which the body is most comfortable is about 80 degrees, therefore I calculate there is continually about 20 degrees above normal that is latent in the body, or the real temperature is 120 degrees instead of 98 degrees."

"LATENT heat" is sometimes said to be a misleading term, but to name it "invisible work," which perhaps more truly describes it, would hardly be an improvement for popular use. It is the heat energy required to change the state of a body from solid to liquid or from liquid to vapor. In producing the change it disappears as heat and takes the form that physicists name "work." When the same body changes back again from vapor to liquid or from liquid to solid the "latent heat" reappears as actual heat.

The reason why heat disappears in the process of melting a solid, or of vaporizing a liquid, is that in each case the molecules of the substance are driven farther apart, and this can not occur without the performance of work. The energy for this work is furnished by the heat applied to produce the increased vibration that causes the change of state. Different substances require different amounts of work for the change of state, and in every case the amount of heat used up in supplying this work disappears as temperature, and continues to exist only as the energy of separation keeping the molecules of the substance in their more expanded state.

Thus there is a "latent heat of fusion," the amount of which differs for different solids, and there is also a "latent heat of vaporization," which diffess for different liquids.

The latent heat of ice, i. e., the quantity of heat energy required to change ice to water, without altering the temperature, is found to be 146 thermal units, or 80 calories per pound. In experimenting with this you will find that there is no alteration of temperature as long as the ice is not yet turned to water. The temperature of the ice at the beginning is 32 deg. Fah., and the water produced by the melting has the same temperature, because the heat applied is all used up in work to drive the molecules of ice from the solid to the liquid condition. More heat applied after that change has been completed will, of course, increase the temperature of the water.

Similarly the latent heat of steam is the quantity of heat energy required to change water into steam, and no change of temperature appears until after the change of state has been effected. At the critical point both water and steam are at 212 deg. Fah. But after the change of state the steam may be superheated by the application of more heat.

It would be rather confusing to speak of the latent heat of the human body, which is made up of substances in both the liquid and the solid state. The body is an engine, continually producing heat by a process of oxydation, and giving forth its surplus heat to its surroundings. Stopping evaporation from the skin, prevents the normal escape of heat from the body and thus causes an accumulation of internal temperature. Surrounding the body with cold air in direct contact with the skin opens too wide the avenues of escape for the bodily heat, and the temperature falls below the normal.

These changes do not affect the latent heat locked up in the bodily substances, but if a man freezes to death, the bodily liquids becoming changed to ice, then there is a disappearance of latent heat.

Good at Home

HAVE you heard of the little Chinese girl who cried because she found out that all Americans are not Christians?

If Christianity is such a good thing that missionaries came so far to tell them about it in far away China, she could not understand how it is that each and everyone in this country has not embraced the Christian faith.

But isn't it true that we often lose sight of the fact that charity begins at home?

Workers think of distance as desirable in choosing their point of production.

Students go far to schools and colleges to learn facts that have been told them again and again at home.

The prophet in his own country is not worth listening to, but others outside are impressed and a large following grows up.

Why don't you take stock of the good things you can find around near your own home, before you say that all the worthwhile things are to be found at a distance?

Tales That Are Told

Inattentive

SUDDENLY a cloud seemed to cast the bride's features, and with an anxious note in his voice, the groom asked what was wrong.

"Oh-h-h!" And great sobs began to shake her frame. She brought forth a handkerchief to mop up her tears.

"What is it?" he cried, tremendously perturbed. "Why are you sobbing like that?"

"Be-be-because you are growing cold towards me. You don't love me any more!"

"Oh, my dear," he wailed, "how could you say that?"

The girl looked up at him.

"Well," she said, "I saw you look out of the window twice."

The P'ups Problem

AN ENGLISHMAN and an American were arguing about queer dialects.

"'Why," said the former, "you use the queerest expressions I ever heard. The other afternoon I accosted a Negro and asked him if he thought it would rain, and do you know what he said? He said, 'Little dogs it will and little dogs it won't.'"

The American was puzzled, and the next afternoon met the Negro with whom the Englishman had conversed. The Negro scratched his woolly head and said:

"That ain' what Ah said. Ah just tol' the man that p'ups it would rain and p'ups it wouldn't."

Time Test of Fame

VARIOUS events in history go to show that it is unwise to name towns, cats, dogs or children after famous people who are still alive or to erect statues of them in public places.

Gregory Zinovieff, side-kick of Trotsky, was a very famous sovieteer and a town in Russia was named in his honor. Now the citizens of Zinovieff have changed the name of the place because their hero has fallen from grace politically.

It is safer to wait until a hero is three of four hundred years dead and be perfectly sure even then that all the returns are in.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—One of the latest to break out in a righteous rash of indignation at the effeminization of man in New York is the rugged historian Theodore Dreiser. He has watched with his customary sulking indifference the change, then exploded.

New York, he growls, has become a city of "pretty men." While his conclusion is overdone slightly, there is some truth to his lament. Every Fifth Avenue stroller has been accustomed to those pathological horrors who powder and rouge their faces and walk "that way."

And it has become a matter of police record that a certain chain of restaurants cater shamefully to a collection of male beauties. New York has reached the same state of indifference to these lollipops as Paris and Vienna. They are often accepted in higher circles of society.

People discuss them as casually as the ordinary topic of current events and every musical comedy has its "Whoops" comedian who essays his insinuating smirks with mincing steps. Several beauty parlors have a steady male patronage and one caters only to men.

In smart tea places there is always a sprinkling of marceled hybrids wearing slave bracelets. Thousands of other men, not of this ilk, in New York attempt a fastidiousness never known before. They spend hours brushing their hair back in classic waves.

Their coats have a waspish flare. And they achieve delicate tintings in sartorial ensemble—neckties, shirts and sox blending into an aesthetic wholeness. Cosmetic parlors sell them all sorts of cleansing creams and complexion beautifiers.

Barber shops are equipped with electrical contrivances to aid the vanity of man. Women write to newspapers complaining they can never adjust their toilet before slot machine mirrors in subway stations. They are always occupied by men.

"Chiseler" is a newly minted slang term for brash boys who horn in on the other fellow's party and never pay a check.

Theater programs grow more fascinating with the seasons. This year they offer a short story and a travel article along with other hodge-podge. Indeed the program is exceeding many plays in interest.

This cigaret aiding the voice foolishness reaches its apex in the recently formed The Tobacco Society for Voice Culture—a ridiculous burlesque organization. It has even been incorporated. Every smoker knows that his throat and general health are better off without smoking. As a smoker I have proved it many times by stopping the habit. So has every other smoker.

In concentrating so earnestly on the harmless effects of cigarets on the throat, tobacco manufacturers are making the sensible think more damage is being done by smoking than they realize. Smoking is a pleasant habit and with some does little harm, but with others the damage is great and lasting.

Such amusing propaganda as this put out by the Tobacco Society for Voice Culture will help give the whole idea the laugh it needs. I quote from the letterhead:

"Our Aim—So to improve the chords of the throat through cigaret smoking that the public will be able to express itself in songs of praise or more easily to swallow anything."

"Our Ultimate Goal: A smoking teacher for every singer."

She was driving and had violated several traffic rules. A traffic Mussolini waved her to the curb and let her have both barrels. As they drove away she turned to her timid husband and said: "Why didn't you say something?" He replied: "He told you what I have been wanting to tell you for 20 years, but never had the nerve."

Moving Pictures in School

By DR. FRANK CRANE

The camera companies have developed a photographic machine that takes moving pictures at home.

The producers recently registered a protest against this, as it was cutting into the business of the moving picture houses.

But the question arises, are the movies merely a form of entertainment, a device for telling a story entertainingly, or, have they a better purpose?

To be sure, such entertainment is worth while, and he who devises a form of worthwhile amusement is not to be lightly esteemed.

But there are many who think that the business of education and instruction ranks higher and is a more permanent and dependable thing.

There are some subjects, such as geography and history, that can better be taught by a pictorial representation upon the screen than any other way.

A child witnessing a reproduction of some historical event remembers it better than merely by reading about it, just as often a story can be made more entertaining upon the screen than on the printed page.

And should not the movie be in every schoolhouse? Not only for the purpose of history and geography, but for many nature studies, for surgical experiments and matters of this kind, a movie could be profitably used.

With the present equipment it would not be so very expensive to furnish all the school houses with materials for reproducing movies, and it would not be too much for the moving picture business to provide the screens requisite for teaching.

Just as we have novels and always will have them to entertain us, but at the same time have many more books for the purpose of instructing us, so the movies may continue to be a form of entertainment, but should also develop upon their instructive side.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

We Snored Alike

I MADE camp with a Murderer one night.

He was a very old man, one of those tramp prospectors who shuffle up and down gullies of the Sierra Nevada panning just about enough to buy beans. I was crossing the ridge from my own camp to a new prospect, and night caught us. So I invited him to share my coffee and bacon and he volunteered to make the pancakes. He made them wonderfully. They were as tender as a mother's hand.

After chow we piled more wood on the fire and sat for a while, digesting our food, sizing each other up. I had heard of his exploit but had never met him before. It had happened years before, in the '70s at a fandango. Two Indians and a Mexican. Almost at one shot. Quite a record, even for a fandango hall. It was evident that he wanted to talk about it, but he was a little cautious at first, not knowing how a lady might judge such affairs. When he saw that I wasn't in the judging business he warmed to his subject and gave me all the details with great gusto. He said he hadn't been feeling quite himself.

From that we drifted to the sort of talk that usually goes on between lonely people by a camp fire. He told me about his dog—a remarkable dog, a little wall-eyed, but "more human than most folks" he assured me. We found that we were both fond of sweet peas and he told me the best time to plant them. Also directions for curing coon skins. Then he showed me the picture of his little girl in her confirmation dress. The picture was very old, and, to me, quite dim. But he could see her plainly.

Later on, we rolled in our blankets, on either side of the fire. I lay awake for a long while. I could hear the Murderer snoring. He snored exactly like other men. I looked up and over the mesquite bushes at the stars. They blinked back at me—and they didn't blink a bit brighter for me than they did for the Murderer. We both looked alike to the stars.

Over on the mesa the coyotes howled. There was hunger in that howl—a pressing, personal sort of hunger, so it seemed to me. But they did not howl more hungrily for my innocent flesh than they did for his tainted meat. Undoubtedly we would have tasted the same to the coyotes.

It was still out there. Empty and enormous. Presently my drowsy thoughts seemed to spill out of their civilized boundaries and go nosing around, like coyotes.

A Murderer—I thought.

A Murderer who likes sweet peas and cooks tender pancakes and treasures the picture of his little girl. Strange. Not at all the sort of a thing you'd expect in a murderer.

Suddenly another thought came. An uncomfortable thought—SWEET PEAS BESIDE THE MURDER STAIN IN THAT MAN'S HEART.

I WONDER IF THERE IS POSSIBLY A MURDER STAIN BESIDE THE SWEET PEAS IN MINE?

Well—!

I rolled over and went to sleep too. We both snored. To the listening coyotes, we snored alike.

The Rhyming Optimist

Still Akin

MUCH would we give to pass again
Through days as sweet as April rain,
With all Earth chanting Spring's refrain!
How golden was that time of youth,
No hint of wrong, no thought of ruth;
All light and loveliness and truth!
But wise men seek to find content,
However poor their tenement,
When youth's bright coin has all been spent.
And memory of bliss gone by
Lends gleams of brightness to the sky,
Whereunder now our paths may lie.
